World Cup Prelude Tonight at the 'G'

By Andrew Marmont

New Zealand face trans-Tasman rivals Australia for the first time in five years tonight at the MCG.

Since the Socceroos' 1-0 victory in London in 2005, both have watched each other grow as football nations and this year will play in a World Cup together for the first time.

With Australia's qualification and over-achievement at the 2006 World Cup and moving to the ASEAN confederation to compete with better sides, New Zealand indirectly benefited from their success. After the A-League was created New Zealand footballers could play professionally without the need to go to Europe or America.

Last year the Wellington Phoenix dramatically reached the semi-finals and captured Kiwi sporting attention overnight. Add in a fever-pitch atmosphere at Wellington in November, where New Zealand's 1-0 win over Bahrain earned qualification to this years Cup for the first time in 28 years, and the stage is now set for the All Whites to perform again on the world arena.

New Zealand appears a group of journeymen with skipper and Blackburn Rovers defender Ryan Nelsen standing out like a colossus. Yet coach Riki Herbert has formed a hard-working squad with an ability to play consistent football.

Gold Coast striker Shane Smeltz was last years' Golden Boot winner in the A-League and led the goal-scoring in the 2009 Oceania Federations Cup, with Celtic-based Chris Killen, Phoenix' Leo Bertos and aggressive Plymouth Argyle striker Rory Fallon possessing aerial and attacking flair. Experienced duo Simon Elliott and Nelsen will make sure Australia work hard through the mid-field.

Herbert knows how to beat Australia – he was part of the 1982 New Zealand World Cup qualifiers squad who blocked the Socceroos from advancing. After a sensational 3-3 draw at Mt Smart in Auckland, the two teams squared off at the Sydney Cricket Ground and New Zealand won 2-0 to advance.

New Zealand football teams are not weighed down by public expectation like their rugby union counter parts. The All

World Cup spots are still at stake as the Socceroos prepare for the Trans Tasman farewell match against New Zealand with an open training session during the week. PHOTO: SYDNEY LOW

Whites do not play regularly enough for fans to expect greatness, which means they can play without a nation's pressure on their shoulders.

Pim Verbeek, Australia's coach, will play a strong line-up and may experiment as he trims his squad from 30 to 23. Key striker Harry Kewell is under an injury cloud and should be rested, as is goalkeeper Mark Schwarzer.

The Socceroos are an experienced side and will use their World Cup experience four years ago as a success benchmark. Nelsen's Blackburn teammate Vince Grella and Brett Emerton give hardness to their central play while Italian-based Mark Bresciano and Everton's Tim Cahill provide excellent finishing quality. Captain Lucas Neil and Luke Wilshire add vast experience at the back.

The match itself shouldn't be a high scoring game; both sides can ill-afford any injuries or suspensions and are not laden with the striking power of Spain or Brazil. Recent history points also to a low-scoring match – the last three matches between the two featured one goal in each.

In the broad scheme of this match, providing there is a bumper crowd, it could be a catalyst for more regular New Zealand-Australia matches. Five years is a long time in football and on the eve of the latest World Cup, now might be the time to re-create a regular fixture.

Australia has won four of its last five encounters against New Zealand, with the All Whites winning once.

Star studded line-up launch exhibition for FIFA World Cup Bid

It was a line up of past and present stars who kicked off the Global Game: A history of football in Australia exhibition at the National Sports Museum at the MCG on Thursday.

Current Socceroos, Scott Chipperfield and Carl Valeri, were on hand to support Theresa Deas, Matildas keeper in the 1980s as she scored with a penalty kick to launch the photographic exhibition.

Also alongside her were Ted Smith, who played for Australia in the Olympic Games in Melbourne in 1956, Jimmy Rooney, a star of the 1974 World Cup team, Edi Krnceanic, striker and top scorer in the Belgian league with Anderlecht and Gary Cole, striker and now head of football at Melbourne Victory.

Also in the frame were Jimmy Armstrong, Socceroo and South Melbourne legend and in the background, Jack Reilly, another of the 1974 Socceroos and now a board member of the Football Federation Australia.

The exhibition which draws on the huge collection of photographs by Les Shorrock and those collected by Laurie Schwab now held in the Deakin University archives in Geelong is open to the public on Monday 24 May and will run until 8 August.

Goal Weekly's Daniel Flis and Sydney Low also have pictures in the gallery. There is half-price admission to the Museum with your entry ticket to the Socceroos game against New Zealand tonight.

SFC welcome Ryall decision

Hyundai A-League 2010 Champions Sydney FC has welcomed today's decision by the Office of the NSW Director of Public Prosecutions to officially drop charges against defender Sebastian Ryall.

"This is a tremendous relief for Sebastian. Throughout the process he has shown great resolve to be able to play an integral part of Sydney FC's success last year while trying to clear his name," Sydney FC CEO Edwin Lugt said.

Sydney FC steadfastly supported Sebastian throughout the entire process.

"Everyone at Sydney FC is happy for Sebastian and now we all look forward to a successful season."

Ryall was charged, on 15 May 2009, with engaging in a sexual act with a 13 year old girl. The alleged incident happened in January 2008, while he was playing with Melbourne Victory.

The Director of Public Prosecutions dropped the charges against Ryall after a submission by Ryall's legal team that at the time of the alleged incident, he believed the girl to be over the legal age of 16.

Roar sink City

A Mitch Nichols brace has helped Brisbane Roar claim a 3-2 victory over Brisbane City in the first game of Roar's pre-season Roadshow program.

Nichols goals – one with his feet and one from his head – and a late Henrique goal was enough to see off a plucky City side.

Jamieson joins Sydney FC

Adelaide United FC defender Scott Jamieson has agreed to terms with Hyundai A-League 2010 Champions Sydney FC, signing a two year deal.

Jamieson spent two years with Adelaide and played 49 matches, which also included a Socceroo debut last year, after being signed from Bolton Wanderers in England.

In his first season with the Reds he was crowned the "AUFC Young Player of the Year", as well as the "A-League Rising Star Award" after taking the Hyundai A-League by storm.

Reds coach Aurelio Vidmar said that losing Jamieson to Sydney, was another step towards his football career and his journey of becoming a better footballer.

"We wish Scott all the best, he was great for us but he has opted for a new chapter in his football career, and he goes with our blessing. Scott always gave 100% and always played with passion" Vidmar said.

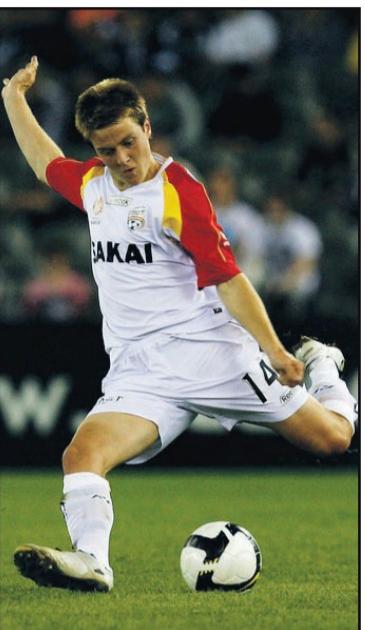

Jamieson said he enjoyed his time with Adelaide and will miss his team mates, and is grateful for the opportunity that was given to him to play in the A-League two seasons ago.

"I absolutely loved it, everything about Adelaide, the people the club my teammates, and the people that brought me to the club like Sam (Ciccarello) and Aurelio (Vidmar) and the opportunity they gave me, they all made me feel so welcome". Jamieson said.

"But leaving the boys who I can call some of my best mates is tough, but that's football and you have to get on with it. Playing against them will be a new experience, but you gotta take out the emotion and hype out of it. I have got nothing but respect for my team mates, and also the Adelaide United fans who were fantastic while I was there over the two years, and it will be a special moment for me playing against the club."

Jamieson paid special mention to Aurelio Vidmar, the staff and the people at the club.

Scott Jamieson swaps the City of Churches for the City of Sin.

HAL Fixtures released

The draw for the Hyundai A-League 2010/11 season has been released by Football Federation Australia (FFA).

The Hyundai A-League will kick off on Thursday night August 5 with the newest franchise club Melbourne Heart hosting the Central Coast Mariners at AAMI Park in Melbourne.

The season culminates on the second weekend of March, 2011 with an extra 30 matches taking the total season matches to 165 and even accomodating its first ever-double header..

While still fitting into a 27-week period the Hyundai A-League 2010/11 season will see 30 midweek matches played in peak football and holiday periods taking on a more European style, continuing the development of the league into a professional and dynamic competition.

"This Hyundai A-League season sees more matches played, more inter-city derbies, and more intensity in fixture scheduling to move Australian football to the next level in its development," said FFA CEO Ben Buckley.

South docked 6 points

The independent Football Federation Victoria (FFV) Appeals Board met on Wednesday 5th May to hear an appeal in relation to penalties arising from a pitch invasion at the Round 6 Victorian Premier League fixture between South Melbourne FC and Heidelberg United FC.

After considering the submission, the Appeals Board has deducted six championship points from South Melbourne FC and determined that the Round 6 match stand as a 1-1 draw.

In handing down its decision the Appeals Board stated: "We regard the circumstances relating to this charge as very serious. It is unacceptable that games are abandoned in these circumstances. Pitch invasions seriously damage the reputation of football in Victoria. Players are entitled to play the game in safety without physical and verbal abuse from spectators."

Football Federation Victoria fully supports the independent Appeals Board decisions, as it takes a zero tolerance approach to inappropriate behaviour at all FFV fixtures. The safety of all players, officials and supporters is paramount. Penalties of this severity will be enforced across the board for transgressions of this nature.

In a statement released by South Melbourne the club expressed its disappointment with the decision and intends to appeal.

South Hobart celebrates its centenary

By Walter Pless

The South Hobart Football club is 100 years old this week, making it one of Australia's oldest.

It's been a huge week for the club as the media focused attention on the 100th anniversary celebrations.

It began with a reception hosted at Government House on Wednesday, 19 May, by His Excellency the Honourable Peter Underwood, the Governor of Tasmania, and Mrs Underwood.

Two hundred people were in attendance and they included the coaches of other Tasmanian clubs, politicians, government officials, and players and supporters of South Hobart.

The next evening, after training, the 15 lucky players selected for the senior team on the weekend, were presented with replica shirts as worn by the South Hobart team in the period 1912-1914.

South Hobart, who currently head the Forestry Tasmania Southern Premier League by 8 points, play second-placed Glenorchy Knights at Washington Street on Sunday.

That's where the club played their first-ever match on 21 May 1912 against a team from the steamship Westralia.

South Hobart official Brian Downes with one of the replica shirts from 1912-1914 which the team will wear against Glenorchy Knights on Sunday

South Hobart coach Ken Morton presents the No. 7 shirt to midfielder Shae Hickey. The shirts will be washed after the game and each one will be framed and auctioned later in the year at the Centenary Dinner, at which Les Murray will be the MC.

to the media and public at a media conference on Friday at Mawson Place, on the Hobart waterfront.

South Hobart are the reigning champions, having won the league for the past two seasons under coach Ken Morton.

If they beat Knights on Sunday, they will be 11-points clear after 10 rounds in the 21-round competition and well on the way to a hat-trick of successive titles, which would be a wonderful way to celebrate the club's centenary.

Internacional and “la U” in semis

Brazil's Internacional of Porto Alegre and Universidad de Chile have reached the semi finals of the Copa Libertadores despite quarterfinal losses on Thursday, joining Sao Paulo and Chivas Guadalajara of Mexico in the final four. Internacional will face Sao Paulo in the semifinals to avoid two clubs from the same country appearing in the final, leaving Chivas to face Universidad de Chile, “la U” in the other match. The semis will take place after the World Cup has finished.

Chivas of Mexico became the first club through to the semifinals of this year's Copa Libertadores despite suffering a 2-0 loss to Paraguay's Libertad on Tuesday. Adalberto Román opened the scoring for Libertad in the 20th minute and Manuel Macías added a second in the 68th, but Chivas won the first leg 3-0 a week ago and hung on to advance on aggregate goals. Chivas made the semifinals despite being without five first choice players who have been called up to a World Cup training camp with the Mexican national squad.

In the other quarterfinals, Sao Paulo defends a 2-0 advantage at home against Brazilian counterpart Cruzeiro on Wednesday. On Thursday, (Friday local AEST) Universidad de Chile hosted Brazil's Flamengo with a 3-2 lead, while defending champion Estudiantes of Argentina needs to overturn a 1-0 deficit at home against another Brazilian club, Internacional.

That return leg in La Plata saw Internacional lose 2-1 to defending champion Estudiantes but advanced on away goals after winning the first leg 1-0. Universidad de Chile also advanced on away goals despite losing 2-1 at home in the return against Flamengo, thanks to a 3-2 win in the first match in Brazil.

Leandro González and Enzo Pérez scored in the first half of Estudiantes' 2-1 win, but Giuliano's goal in the 89th-minute gave Internacional the overall victory on away goals. Players were involved in violent clashes in the closing moments as Brazil's Internacional knocked out Estudiantes de La Plata. “Pincharatas” defender Leandro Desabato and his countryman, Internacional's former national Argentine goalkeeper Roberto Abbondanzieri were among the players to clash at the final whistle, with Desabato appearing to head-butt the nicknamed “Pato” Abbondanzieri followed by verbal exchanges. Estudiantes won last year's title, beating Cruzeiro in the final.

Giuliano struck in the 89th minute with the crucial goal that sent the Brazilian side, who won the first leg 1-0 at home in Porto Alegre last week, through on the away goals rule after the tie ended 2-2 on aggregate. Inter, champions in 2006, go into an all-Brazilian semi-final against three times winners Sao Paulo, who eliminated last year's runners-up Cruzeiro, also of Brazil, on Wednesday. The match was marred when Inter's reserve goalkeeper Lauro came on after the final whistle and hit Estudiantes defender Leandro Desabato from behind before running into the dressing room as police tried to control the players. The incident, which seemed to have been sparked by an argument between Desabato and Inter's Argentine goalkeeper Roberto Abbondanzieri, did not develop into a free-for-all.

Estudiantes had taken a quick two-goal lead with two superb strikes in the 19th and 21st minutes. Captain Juan Sebastian Verón found Leandro Gonzalez with a brilliant, high cross field pass to the left edge of the box where the striker lobbed Abbondanzieri. Internacional (or Inter) had hardly absorbed the shock when winger Enzo Perez cut inside from the left and sent a curling right-footed shot over Abbondanzieri into the top far corner. As the match approached its end, Estudiantes sat back and allowed Inter to come at them, with disastrous consequences when substitute playmaker Giuliano sent a low shot inside the base of Agustín Orion's far post with one minute to go.

In the other quarterfinal in Santiago, Vagner Love gave Flamengo the lead with a header from Adriano's overhead kick just after half time as the Brazilian club looked to overturn the surprise 3-2 defeat suffered against Universidad in the Maracana stadium last week. Flamengo needed to win by two clear goals, but was pegged back level when Walter Montillo lifted a precise chip over goalkeeper Bruno from the edge of the area in the 74th minute. Former Inter Milan striker Adriano gave Flamengo hope with a 78th-minute goal after Leo Moura backheeled the ball into his path, but the Brazilian club was unable to find the extra goal needed to progress. Holders Estudiantes were eliminated from the Libertadores Cup Internacional beat defending champ Estudiantes on away goals.

Claudio Borghi was handed the task on returning Boca Juniors to the top of Argentine soccer.

Borghi is the first person at the club to win titles as both a player and a coach. He also took Colo-Colo back-to-back Apertura and Clausura championships in neighbouring Chile between 2006 and 2007 with four consecutive championships. “At first we came into the season trying not to be relegated,” Borghi said. “Now we are champions. We have to enjoy it all. I think all the players did an extraordinary job ... I'm happy for the club, and today is a special day for me.” This is the eighth different champion in the last eight seasons in Argentina. The two biggest clubs—Boca Juniors and River Plate—have each won once in that period.

The match was soiled at the end inside Huracán's stadium when police needed to use a high-powered water hose to control angry young men, who attacked police and hurled objects at them and opposing players. At least one policeman was struck by his own nightstick after lost it in a run-in with hooligans.

Just days later on Friday, Claudio Borghi was handed the task on Thursday of returning Boca Juniors to the top of Argentine soccer, five days after steering Argentinos Juniors to the Clausura title. Borghi, who was part of the Argentina squad that won the 1986 World Cup, signed a one year contract to coach the fallen giants, four times South American champions since 2000.

“At Boca, there's a thin line between what's good and what's bad, so Boca will be a big challenge,” the 45-year-old told a news conference at his official presentation at the Bombonera (chocolate box) stadium.

“The only objective here, as in all big clubs, is to be champions,” said Borghi, who steered Colo Colo to four successive Chilean titles before taking charge at his former club Argentinos in January.

“It shows this is Boca, at Argentinos there were two or three journalists,” added Borghi with a grin.

“We as a coaching staff feel very proud to be at this club with so much history at national and international level.”

Borghi said he has discussed reinforcements with Boca president Amor Ameal and said midfielder Matias Fernandez who is going to the World Cup with Chile and is unsettled at Sporting in Portugal is a potential target. “Matias is a player I know well, we had him at Colo Colo, he was sold to the ‘Yellow Submarine’ (Villarreal), he's an Argentine naturalised Chilean so he won't fill a foreigner's berth (in the squad),” said Borghi. Boca finished the Clausura last weekend in 16th place with 20 points from 19 matches and the worst defence having conceded 35 goals.

“I don't want to be rude to the coaches who were here before me and I believe there's a bit of balance lacking,” said Borghi. He is the latest signing as Argentina's big clubs attempt to pull out of a slump. Boca's arch-rivals River Plate hired Angel Cappa last month.

In other results in Argentina on Friday and Saturday in the final round of play: Arsenal 1, Godoy Cruz 2; San Lorenzo 2, Newell's Old Boys 1; Banfield 3, Boca Juniors 0; Gimnasia 3, Atletico Tucuman 3; Chacarita 1, Racing Club 2; Independiente 1, Lanus 0; Rosario Central 0, Velez 0; River Plate 1, Tigre 5.

In Argentina, the two teams with the worst records over the last three years are demoted. River Plate will begin next season at the bottom of the relegation table and could face relegation at this time next season. River Plate, Boca Juniors and Independiente are the only three teams that have never been relegated to the second tier.

In other domestic leagues, four players were sent off, two from each side, as Peñarol beat arch-rivals Nacional 1-0 in a tense first leg of the Uruguayan final, while Caracas FC won the Venezuelan Clausura championship at the weekend. In Colombia, both team's goalkeepers were sent off as Atletico Junior beat Envigado 2-0 to qualify for the Apertura semi-finals and the match between Boyaca Chico and America was suspended with eight minutes remaining because of crowd trouble.

URUGUAY

Peñarol ended a seven-year wait for the Uruguay league title on Tuesday after midfielder Matias Aguirregaray's goal earned them a 1-1 with arch-rivals Nacional. Winners of the Clausura title in the second half of the season with a record run of 14 wins and one draw, Peñarol lifted the trophy 2-1 on aggregate. Nacional won the season opening Apertura championship in December.

Coach Diego Aguirre was in charge when Peñarol last won the title in 2003 and he was at the helm again this year appointed after the team had a disappointing Apertura. “There was a need to be champions, Peñarol needed to win, the happiness is incomparable. This is a moment of glory,” former Penarol player Aguirre told reporters. “We had a great championship, we beat all the teams and that's exceptional.”

Celebrations by fans of Penarol, one of the country's big two clubs, were marred by violence in central Montevideo. Central defender Alejandro Lembo put Nacional ahead in the 35th minute when he headed in a corner before Aguirregaray equalised in the 68th minute. Penarol had midfielder Gastón Ramírez sent off in the 79th minute and Nacional substitute forward Sergio Blanco was also shown the red card three minutes from full-time.

In the first leg played last Sunday, forward Antonio Pacheco headed the only goal in the 22nd minute as Peñarol won the first leg of the grand final of the Uruguayan season. There were four red cards in the final half hour as tempers frayed in a tense encounter at the Centenario stadium in Montevideo. Nacional had substitutes Maximiliano Calzada and Matías Cabrera shown the red card and their coach Eduardo Acevedo was sent to the stands. Peñarol midfielder Jonathan Urretaviscaya and substitute Rubén Olivera were also dismissed. Cabrera had only been on the pitch four minutes and Olivera eight.

VENEZUELA

Caracas were held 1-1 at home by Deportivo Anzoátegui but lifted the Clausura crown on goal difference from Apertura title winners Deportivo Tachira, who beat Centro Italo 3-1. The new champions had a goal difference of plus 15 to Tachira's plus 13.

COLOMBIA

Striker Carlos Bacca scored twice, his first goal a penalty, to give Atletico Junior a 2-0 win over Envigado and send them into a semi-final against title holders Independiente Medellin. Envigado goalkeeper Andres Saldaña was dismissed in the 48th minute for bringing down Bacca. The striker put Junior 1-0 up by beating substitute keeper Victor Soto with the penalty and headed the second 15 minutes from time.

Junior keeper Didier Munoz had been sent off in the 17th minute. The other semi-final of the Apertura championship will be between La Equidad and Deportes Tolima. Boyacá Chico were leading 1-0 at home against America with eight minutes to go when fans of the visiting team from Cali caused trouble on the terraces. The match was suspended and the result stands.

MEXICO

Santos and Toluca have reached the final of the Mexican Clausura tournament. Oribe Peralta scored a hat-trick as Santos humiliated Morelia 7-1 on Saturday to complete a 10-4 aggregate semifinal win, while 10-man Toluca progressed with a 1-0 home win over Pachuca.

The two-legged final will be next week, with the first match at Santos' stadium in Torreon in midweek and the return in Toluca at the weekend. Peralta, who was born and raised in Torreon, finished the semifinal series with four goals, just one less than his regular season total.

“We were able to maintain our lead, got a quick score and were able to handle the series,” Peralta said. “We weren't expecting a win like this.” Fernando Arce opened the scoring against Morelia with a free kick curled in from wide that was misjudged by goalkeeper Moises Munoz in the second minute. Luis Gabriel Rey equalized with a penalty two minutes later after Chilean Hugo Drogue was fouled in the box but the scores were not level for long. Darwin Quintero raced clear to put Santos back in front in the 13th minute and Peralta followed up to score after Arce's strike hit the post in the 15th.

Jorge Estrada scored Santos' fourth in the 50th minute, with Peralta adding No. 5 a minute later and completing the first treble of his career in the 82nd. Peralta was also involved in the seventh goal, drawing a foul in the box to allow Matias Vuoso to score from the penalty spot in the 83rd. In the other semifinal, Antonio Rios volleyed the winning goal low into the bottom corner of the net from the edge of the box in the 42nd minute to give Toluca victory against Pachuca. Toluca only needed a draw to reach the final after the first leg ended 2-2, but held out for victory despite Osvaldo Gonzalez being sent off in the 43rd minute.

The final between Toluca and Santos will be the second time the clubs have faced each other for the title. The first meeting was the summer tournament in 2000, when Toluca came out winners. Santos, which was last champion in the Clausura 2008 tournament, is bidding for its fourth Mexican title. Toluca, despite not being considered among Mexico's four biggest clubs, has nine Mexican titles behind only America (10) and Chivas (11). Toluca last won the Mexican championship in the Apertura 2008 tournament.

Santos Laguna will meet Toluca in the Mexican Clausura championship final after a 7-1 rout of Morelia including a hat-trick by striker Oribe Peralta for a record aggregate of 10-4. The 14 goals scored in the tie equalled the record set in the 1989-90 semi-finals when Puebla beat Pumas UNAM 8-6. Toluca went through when a 1-0 win gave them a 3-2 aggregate victory over Pachuca. The first leg is on Thursday and the second next Sunday.

PARAGUAY

Guaraní beat Sport Colombia 1-0 and snatched the lead from Cerro Porteño, who lost 2-0 to Libertad. Guarani have

43 points and giant Cerro

Porteo of Asuncion with 42 points with a match in hand. Olimpia, the biggest domestic club in Paraguay and the most successful at the Clausura historically are lying third on 39 points having lost ground with the 2-1 defeat by Sol de América.

PERU

Leaders San Martín were held to a 1-1 draw at home by champions Universitario whose striker Piero Alva scored a spectacular last-gasp equaliser with an overhead kick. San Martín have 32 points, five more than César Vallejo and Sporting Cristal after 14 matches.

BOLIVIA

Wilstermann beat San José 2-1 away and lead the six-team championship group for the Apertura title with seven points from three matches. They are two points ahead of Aurora and Bolívar who drew 2-2 in Cochabamba.

Finally, Brazilian soccer star Romario is taking up a new game — politics. The Brazilian Socialist Party says he will be one of its candidates for a seat in Congress in the October general elections. Romario's campaign coordinator says the former striker wants to concentrate on such issues as health and education. In 1994, Romario led Brazil to the 1994 World Cup title and was voted the world's best player.

He joined the Brazilian Socialist Party last year. Campaign coordinator Marco San said Tuesday that Romario's candidacy to the lower house of Congress will be ratified at the party's convention in June. San said Romario was “out of town and could not be reached for comment.”

Mourinho guides Inter to European glory

Jose Mourinho wrote his name into the history books as Diego Milito inspired Inter Milan to Champions League glory against Bayern Munich at the Bernabeu.

Milito set Inter on their way against the run of play with a clipped finish.

And he wrapped up a win built on the foundations of a solid defence with a solo effort that saw Inter become the first Italian side to win the Treble.

It means Mourinho, who won the cup with Porto in 2004, becomes the third man in history to win it with two clubs.

He joins Ernst Happel and Ottmar Hitzfeld in earning that remarkable accolade - at the age of only 47 - and, in doing so, ends a wait of more than 45 years for the Nerazzurri to regain Europe's top prize.

That he did so by overcoming his mentor Louis van Gaal, with whom he worked at Barcelona in the 1990s, in the process only served to complete the ultimate season of personal vindication for the Portuguese.

If reports are to be believed, it is a triumph that will earn Mourinho the manager's position at arguably the world's biggest club, Real Madrid, this summer.

How fitting, then, that this triumph was earned at Real's magnificent Bernabeu stadium - and as Mourinho waved to the Inter fans after watching his side lift the trophy, it looked every inch a wave goodbye and confirmation this will prove the denouement of his career in Italy.

As for the match itself, while it might not have been one for the purists, as an occasion it was spectacular.

The decision to switch the match to a Saturday evening was fully justified as both sets of supporters rocked the Bernabeu from the first minute to the last.

And on the field, the fare was no less entralling.

The build-up had been dominated by Van Gaal's and Arjen Robben's description of Mourinho as a defensive tactician - but if their hope was that such taunts would prompt a more ambitious approach from the Italian champions, they were to be disappointed.

The first couple of minutes aside, when Inter hinted at an expansive approach, Mourinho's side's tactics were clearly to stay strong defensively and pounce on the counter attack.

For a long time, though, it played right into Bayern's hands. With Robben giving left-back Christian Chivu a torrid time and Mark van Bommel pulling the strings in midfield, the Germans almost completely dominated.

Playing with an air of expression and invention, Bayern probed the Inter back-line time and again. Robben beat Chivu down the right to set up Ivica Olic, the Croatian slamming wide, Hamit Altintop saw a right-foot shot deflected wide and Robben then skewed wide when well placed 18 yards out.

At the other end, Wesley Schneider saw a deflected 40-yard free-kick beaten away by Bayern keeper Hans-Jorg Butt and Esteban Cambiasso had a firm volley blocked.

But Inter's attacking personnel were largely anonymous in the face of the Germans' control.

Then, on 34 minutes, came Inter's ambush, Milito nodding Inter keeper Julio Cesar's long clearance down to Schneider and then dashing on to the Dutchman's smart return to clip home a delightful finish.

Mourinho's muted celebrations highlighted his awareness that it was a lead his side barely deserved.

It could - and should - however, have been 2-0 moments before the break when, racing into the box, Schneider shot tamely from Milito's lay-off and Butt palmed away his effort from 16 yards out.

Still, having watched Inter repel pass-masters Barcelona with 10 men in the semi-final, Bayern boss Van Gaal will have been all too mindful of the Italians' ability to defend a lead and he sent his team out flying in the second half.

Just moments after the restart, the German champions should have been level, Thomas Mueller failing to connect smartly enough with a sliding finish with just the keeper to beat, allowing Cesar to beat his shot away.

It was a miss he was almost made to rue within minutes as Milito burst down Bayern's left, cut the ball back to Pandev, only for Butt to brilliantly tip the Macedonian's clipped effort past the post.

Predictably, though, the pattern for the second half had been set - Bayern controlling possession and Inter sitting deep and breaking.

Robben remained far and away Bayern's most potent weapon, his pace and skill down the right prompting almost continuous volleys from an increasingly frustrated Mourinho on the sidelines.

A free-kick from the Dutchman almost led to an equaliser when it fell to Mueller, only for the German's snap-shot to be blocked, before a fine curler again brought the best out of Cesar in the Inter goal minutes later.

But, just as in the first half, for all their considered build-up Bayern were always vulnerable on the counter attack, and another moment of Milito magic settled it.

The Argentine - a constant thorn in the Germans' side - had it all to do when he collected a pass from Samuel Eto'o on 70 minutes.

But Milito was not to be denied and turned defender Mark van Buyten brilliantly - though far too easily - before side-footing a sensational 30th goal of his season.

The goal was effectively game, set and match, Bayern's sting very much drawn and Inter allowed to coast to victory thereafter.

The final whistle prompted a warm embrace between Mourinho and Van Gaal, before the Portuguese enjoyed the celebrations with his team. But he then stalked the Inter end a lone figure, waving deadpanned towards the Nerazzurri faithful.

Having beaten the English, Spanish and German champions en route to European club football's most sought-after trophy, few could deny Mourinho his moment - nor his place in history.

Serbia coach Radomir Antic has cut six players from his World Cup squad, the only dilemma remaining is which goalkeeper will miss out. Chelsea youngsters Nemanja Matic and Slobodan Rajkovic will look ahead to 2014 as will Ajax starlet Miralem Sulejmani who did not have the best of seasons.

Red Star's top scorer Dejan Lekic will feel annoyed as the last strikers spot went to Serbian League Top Scorer and Player of the Year Dragan Mrdja. Partizan's young midfielder Nemanja Tomic won't be joining his teammate Radosav Petrovic in South Africa. Petrovic was the surprise inclusion having caught the eye of Antic after scoring a 35 yard screamer against Red Star.

Dejan Stankovic has won his first Champions League title his twenty third honour as Inter defeated Bayern Munich 2:0 in the Final.

Zagreb striker Davor Vugrinec is the leagues Golden Boot Winner after scoring 18 goals this season. Vugrinec has scored 116 goals in the Croatian League, 10 less than Igor Cvitanovic who holds the record having scored 126 goals.

Hajduk's Bosnian star Senad Ibricic was second on the scorers chart after netting 17 goals. Istra 1961 forward Asim Sehic had a great season scoring 14 times.

League Champions Dinamo Zagreb was also awarded the Fair Play award. They will be hoping to get into the UEFA Champions League group stages for the first time in over a decade. Hajduk will be more than satisfied with winning the Cup and a spot in the Europa League qualifiers. Cibalia will also take part in the Europa League qualifiers after finishing third having been second for most of the season.

The national side defeated Austria 1:0 in a midweek friendly thanks Mate Bilic's 81st minute strike. It was Bilic's third goal in four appearances for Croatia.

The Under 21s drew with Slovakia 1:1 in a European Championship qualifier in Varteks. Schalke midfielder Ivan Rakitic scored a cracker to level the proceedings after Slovakia took the lead. Croatia are still on top of the group with two games remaining they have a two point lead over Slovakia and four points more than Serbia who has a game in hand Miroslav Stankovic opened the scoring after six minutes before Sasa Kajkut added a second twenty minutes later.

Zeljo never gave up and at the start of the second half Edin Visca pulled one back and former Bosnian International Mirsad Beslija scored to level the game. Zeljo looked for a third but Borac would hold on to lift their first Bosnian Cup. They previously won the Yugoslav Cup in 1988 in a match which remembered by Dragan Stojkovic's epic fail penalty chip in the dying moments gifting Borac their maiden trophy.

"This is a great success, especially because we did it away from home," A delighted Borac coach Zoran Maric said and added "This was an incredible match, with an atmosphere one only dreams of. This is proof that football in this country has a bright future. This win is a gift for Borac's fans and the city of Banja Luka."

Zeljo will have the chance to bounce back in the League as they hold a firm grip at the top ahead of Borac with two games remaining.

Bursaspor won their historic title

Turkey

Bursaspor caused the biggest upset in Turkish history winning their first title in a thrilling finish to the Turk SuperLig.

Fenerbahce failed to beat Trabzonspor at home after the match finished 1:1 thus meaning Bursaspor had to win against Besiktas to claim their first league title. The small club won 2:1 and the draw in Istanbul meant Bursa leap frogged Fener into first place sparking major celebrations in Bursa while the Fenerbahce fans started to riot. Bursaspor is only the fifth club to win the Turkish League, the others being giants Galatasaray who had a poor season finishing third, Fenerbahce, Besiktas and Trabzonspor. Fenerbahce were left empty handed this season after losing in the Cup Final to Trabzonspor 3:1. Former Perth Glory and Serbia International Ivan Ergic was an instrumental part of the victorious Bursaspor side.

At the U/17 European Championships, Turkey has booked a spot in the Semi Finals with a game to spare. They kicked off the campaign with a 3:1 win against Greece. Captain Artun Akçakin scored his third of the tournament but it wasn't enough for the win as Hasa scored with 20 minutes remaining. Turkey will have to beat England to avoid Spain in the Semi Finals.

Aussie Soccer Legends Celebrate Top Class Keilor Downs College Facility

By Josip Loncaric

Last Thursday afternoon, the 1,400 students of Keilor Downs College were treated to a once in a lifetime opportunity. Not only was the western suburbs school celebrating the official opening of its brand new soccer pitch and athletics track, but the event also featured two of the most influential figures in Australian soccer history.

School principal Stuart Andrews welcomed retired former Socceroo Edi Krnceanovic and former Australian captain and still not officially retired striker Mark Viduka as special guests at the event.

Amidst the immaculate weather and full attention of the entire student body, the college again showed their consistent strive to improve their facilities for the soccer-mad school.

With the likes of Jason Culina, Zoran Petrevski and Valencia young gun Theo Markelis just some of the names that have been a part of the school, it was fitting to have two superstars to open the full sized synthetic pitch, running track and long jump pit.

Viduka and Krnceanovic were in good spirits as they both scored the first official goals on the pitch from the penalty spot, before heading off to another of the schools top notch facilities, the Flexible Learning Centre, for an informative and entertaining question and answer session with the two stars.

Student leaders and house captains of the college were joined by special guests from surrounding feeder primary schools Monnia, Keilor Mews, Sydenham Hillside and Mary MacKillop to ask their guests a host of questions about their careers.

The superstars answered the questions with great enthusiasm, allowing for great insight into their fascinating path to the peak of their chosen sport.

In particular interest to the students was Viduka's story about his school life, which began in St. Albans and concluded at the Australian Institute of Sport.

"I loved playing sport, and I wasn't a trouble maker. I hope the students can make use of these amazing facilities and really combine their school studies with sport to make the most out of their lives", Viduka said.

The former Leeds United, Glasgow Celtic, Middlesbrough and Newcastle United star also gave some insight into life as a (semi) retired footballer, which the mainstream press would've been keen to hear.

"I'm now in a phase in my life where I have to adjust to not having constant pressure to perform week in week out, and it is a strange feeling. Almost two decades of a strict training routine has now been replaced by a lot of spare time, but I'm not yet certain if I want to play competitive football again", Viduka explained when asked by a keen student about retirement and the future.

Despite signing well over 300 autographs and posing for countless photos – and even juggling a ball with new soccer prospect Sultan Degirmengioglu – Viduka was happy to oblige and made many students dreams come true.

Special mention must go to Principal Stuart Andrews for pushing strongly for the new facilities, Assistant Principals Paul Bloom, Hulya Arif and Linda Maxwell for their support, event organiser and transitions leader Tim Cottrell, Heads of the Sport Department George Katiforis and Stephan Rotella, Head of PE Belinda Parini, the Music Department, lead by Trent Mackenzie and Mia Stathopoulos, guest photographer Steve Starek and all the support staff and students for the efforts to make the event such a special one for the school.

Australia v New Zealand

With Roy Hay

Early days of trans-Tasman rivalry

As with most other sports the rivalry between Australia and New Zealand in football is long-standing.

It can be said to have begun in 1904 when a team from New South Wales visited New Zealand. The following year New Zealand came to Australia and played a series of games in the eastern states, but it was not till 1922 that the first official internationals between the two countries took place. Australia went to New Zealand and on 17 June in Dunedin, the Australians went down by three goals to one. The team which played in that match was George Cartwright, Alan Fisher, Dave Cumberford, Alex Gibb, C Shenton, Peter Doyle, William Dane, Jock Cumberford, Bill Maunder, Dave Ward, Tom Thompson. Bill Maunder scored Australia's only goal. New Zealand drew the second match in Wellington and won the third in Auckland.

In 1923 New Zealand came to Australia for a three match series which it won by two games to one. That was the birth of the 'Ashes of Soccer' contested between the countries until the 1950s. A safety razor case which was carried at Gallipoli formed the basis of the trophy. Australia began with a two-one win in Brisbane with goals by Percy Lennard early on and Bill Maunder in the last minute, but lost 2-3 in Sydney and 1-4 in Newcastle. So in those early days there was no doubt the Kiwis were the superior team. Though there were good crowds for the games in Australia, including an estimated 14,000 in Newcastle, a Chinese team from Hong Kong drew over 47,525 to a game against Australia at the Sydney Showground, according to Phil Mosley.

Matches against New Zealand continued in the 1930s, with Australia recording a three match clean sweep at home in 1933. The most exciting match was the second in Sydney when Australia raced to a five-nil lead and the visitors then struck back with four goals, only for Jack Hughes to score the decisive goal late in the game. The Australian team for that match was Jimmy McNabb, Jack Evans, Jock Parkes, Charlie O'Connor, Ian Davidson, Tom Tennant, Roy Crowhurst, Alec Cameron, George Smith, Jack Hughes, F Smith. Skipper George Smith scored a hat-trick and Roy Crowhurst and Alec Cameron one each. In 1936 it was Australia's turn to visit New Zealand and the Australian dominance continued with another three wins, including a ten-nil whitewash in Wellington in which

George Smith scored five goals.

Encounters between the two countries resumed after the Second World War and in 1948 Australia again had a comfortable passage, winning all four games by big scores in New Zealand. The squad included Ken Hough, Joe Marston, Cec Drummond, Bob Lawrie, Bill Wilson, Angus Drennan, Jock Hodge, Jim Cunningham, Frank Parsons, Ron Hughes, Allan Johns, Alan Duncan, Bill Wilson and Lex Gibb. Frank 'Snipper' Parsons, the rumbustious centre forward, stood out with two hat-tricks and a double hat-trick. In 1954, New Zealand returned to this country, and surprised Australia with a two-one win in Melbourne, before the home team had two 4-1 wins to claim the series. It was closer in the return games in Wellington and Auckland in 1958 when Australia squeaked home with a three-two win in the first match and a two-all draw in the second.

The next time the Socceroos met New Zealand was in Saigon in 1967, when both countries took part in a tournament during the Vietnam War. 'Uncle' Joe Vlasits' team won by five goals to three. Atti Abonyi scored a hat-trick and the others were by Ray Baartz and Johnny Warren. Australia went on to win the tournament and gain its first international trophy. The next encounter also took place overseas in 1972 in Jakarta. Rale Rasic's team which was to qualify for the World Cup in west Germany was taking shape and the line-up which downed New Zealand by three goals to one included Ron Corry, Doug Utjesenovic, Peter Wilson, Manfred Schaefer, Bogdan 'Bugsy' Nyskohus, Jim Rooney (Ray Baartz 46), John McDonald, John Warren, Atti Abonyi, Jim Armstrong (Adrian Alston 53), Terry Butler (Branko Buljevic). Abonyi, Baartz and Warren scored the goals again.

The following two encounters were even more serious and closely contested for they were World Cup qualifiers in 1973. Both games were drawn; one-each in Auckland and three-all in Sydney. It was typical of that World Cup campaign that Australia flirted with elimination at every stage. Brian Turner put the Kiwis one up following a quick free kick just short of the hour mark. Two late substitutions by Rasic paid off with Ernie Campbell and Atti Abonyi replacing Max Tolson and Johnny Warren. Campbell scrambled the ball home with only five minutes left to play. In Sydney in the return, Alan Vest, who was later to coach in Australia, put the New Zealanders ahead with a chip over Ron Corry. That stung the Socceroos and full back Doug Utjesenovic replied after a one-two with Adrian Alston. Then Ray Baartz and Branko Buljevic put Australia three-one up, only for the Kiwis to come roaring back with a goal by Dennis Tindall and an own goal by Bobby Hogg.

Since then the rivalry has continued and even intensified and in a future column we will look at the Socceroos and the All Whites and their matches since 1976.

Once again my thanks to the Ozfootball contributors, John Punshon and Trevor Ruddell of the MCC Library for information.

Inter Milan and Mourinho conquer Europe

Inter Milan are champions of Europe beating Bayern Munich 2-0 in a wonderful display of football, watched by the football world. Argentine international Milito scored two decisive goals and it was great to see an Italian club and a German fight for the trophy for a change.

There's no doubt in my mind the mastermind for Inter Milan success has been their coach Jose Mourinho. Love him or hate him, this man has a knack of producing results and he has continued that trend by delivering success to a club that has not won that trophy in 45 years. This season he won the Serie A, the Coppa Italia, and now, the most prestigious prize in European club football, the Champions League. In most recent times Inter has been forced to live in the shadows of their successful neighbours, AC Milan, but now the Black and Blue side of Milan are the most talked about side in Italian football, and the world over.

Mourinho proved his calibre with Chelsea by winning back-to-back EPL championships, and of course, the Champions League trophy with FC Porto. Is this guy probably one of the best coaches in the world at this moment? I'd definitely say so, along with Sir Alex Ferguson.

Let's analyze why? He runs the show and calls the shots; he picks the players that he wants the club to buy, not the president or the committee; and this is a crucial point in the success of any club.

The man has an eye for talent and ability to bring players in, that other clubs disregard and transform them into champions. He is a champion coach and a player's coach.

This season he assembled a great team and he called it, saying "if the teams fails, it's my fault", and true to his word, he did not fail.

He can read a game and has the ability to make changes on the park as the team requires it. He does not sit there hoping, but instead makes things happen when required. He's not afraid to change the tactics to get the results as we saw against Barcelona with 10 men - incredible! In my previous article I called the result against Barcelona - if only I was a betting man!

So will he leave Inter Milan and go to Real Madrid? Yes, I think he will. It's obvious he loves the challenge on the condition that he calls the shots.

Inter Milan and Mourinho deserve their success. Congratulations to the worthy winners who dispensed of a number of quality teams on the road to the final - Chelsea and Barcelona just to name two. The Italian press eat humble pie, boys! The special one has spoken.

What can we learn from Mourinho's success? Clubs that appoint coaches should allow the coach to make the playing staff selections and who he wants at the club. Remember the issues surrounding Ramon Abramovich's signing of an ageing Schevchenko at Chelsea? Again, football people should make football decisions!

Australian international with 25 caps, Australian Player of the Year, winner of 4 NSL championships, 3 NSL Cups, 557 first grade games, 97 goals from 1976-1996. Played for St George, Sydney Olympic, Apia, Marconi, Melita Eagles and Larissa (Greece). Rated as one of the most technically gifted players ever produced in Australia. Now involved with player development and player management. www.technikfootball.com

In a league of his own: Well, according to the Special One anyway....

World Cup 2010

Please note: Milito - Argentinian international; Messi - Argentinian international; Tevez, Samuel, Masherano, Pastore, Aguero - all Argentinian internationals. Don't you think Argentina is a genuine chance for the World Cup?

Personally, I do. They have come under the radar while everyone is talking of the likes of Spain, Brazil, England and Germany. But, the real threat is Argentina. With Maradona at the helm I'm sure this team will be pumped, and I'm sure he'll want to win the trophy just as much as a coach as he did when he was a player.

We have seen what Lionel Messi can do with his domestic club Barcelona, but his motivation must be to perform on the world stage if he is to be remembered as one of the greats, and the only place to really shine is at the biggest stage on the planet, the World Cup! Food for thought for you folks! Of course, we all want Australia to win the World Cup, but Argentina is my second choice.

But, I will tell you one thing that is for certain, the World Cup will be won by the team that has players with the individual flair and imagination that can create something out of nothing. Remember what the 'Kat' said! Watch out for Robben, Ronaldo, Nani, Messi, Ribery, Tevez, Kaka and Robinho etc.

With Socceroo selection approaching crunch time, I hope Tommy Oar and Nick Carle make the final 23 squad as they have that flair that I'm talking about, and the ability to produce the unexpected. I'd also like to see Nikita Rukavytsya have a run on the world stage, as his speed off the mark is phenomenal.

Good luck boys against the Kiwis!

J WALKER SCOREBOARD 2-10

What a big week it has been at the House of Darebin, now relocated to the Boulevard of Broken dreams where....

Their Legal Eagles assembled once again and dished out fines, and deducted points from various VPL Clubs, quicker than I can skull a tall glass of J Walker.

The Penalty given to Dandenong Thunder for the charges laid against them in their recent match against Sunshine George Cross certainly raises some interesting issues. They were charged for Club Associates intimidating and/or threatening language and/or gestures towards a match Official/s.

The penalty was loss of 3 Championship Points, $4000 fine and 2 Home Games to be played behind closed doors.

From what I can gather, a group of Fans gave a Man in Black some stick, which is something that occurs in every sporting code around the world, it's unfortunate that it happens but it does.

The question I have for Mark and Co, is how do they expect Clubs to control the Verbal Behaviour of every Fan that is in attendance at the various matches being played?

Do they expect Clubs to provide one on one Marshalls to stand next to each supporter and stop them from certain verbal behaviors?

Unreasonable to say the least.

Now let's take the above a little further, and to a higher level.

Manchester United is Playing Chelsea and a group of Manu Supporters begin to verbalise a Linesman, which is something that occurs very often.

Would you then deduct 3 points from them, fine them and force them to play the next 2 Games behind closed doors.

Somehow I don't think so as common sense prevails in the English FA.

Consider this then also.

Club A has it in for Club B, and at Club A's next match, a group of Club B Supporters dress up in Club A Shirts and Scarves, attend the Match, and begin to abuse the Linesman.

How can The Man In Black know for certain the identity of these fans, and whether they in fact belong to a certain Club?

Over to South Melbourne we go where they rolled the dice following the decision handed down, where Heidelberg were handed all 3 points, after certain incidents in their recent Match.

However, this fresh new Dice Role failed miserably as they are now 6 points the poorer.

I am certainly no Legal Eagle, however Blind Freddy can see that St Albans were deducted 9 points for an off the field indiscretion last year, why would South believe that they could get their 2 points back based on that decision.

I would have taken the hit and left it at that.

The NEW GDT By Laws also have a few more interesting spins to them, in that the FFV will read a Man In Blacks incident report, and based on what has been reported, will then hand out hefty fines to Clubs, including loss of points for every team belonging to that Club.

I spotted one such Incident report written by a Man in Black, where the finger was pointed towards One Club, however, their opponents who hardly did anything except question decisions from the Man In Black, are also charged and fined to the tune of $2500!

Personally, I have no issue with the FFV trying to clean up the Game, and punish Clubs for violent behaviour, however, they are going to far, and sending Clubs to the Wall for minor incidents.

After all, the FFV exists to assist Clubs Grow and develop.

Don't they?

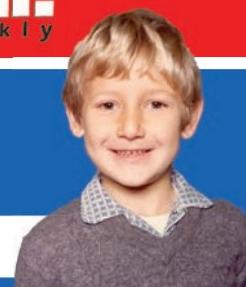

Until Next Week
This is Katsa- just as you have known him.

And remember, keep your friends close and your Club Powerbrokers closer

BOO'S WORLD

With Mark Boric

Is it still too soon to talk about the penalties handed down to some VPL clubs this week, or should I wait until any further appeals have been heard?

After an appeal, the result of the abandoned game between South Melbourne and Heidelberg United was altered once again. It reverted from the initial 3-0 forfeit awarded to Heidelberg back to a 1-1 draw, the score at the time the game was abandoned late in the piece. South Melbourne were, however, stripped of six points.

Is this too harsh? Not compared to the punishment suffered by St Albans last year, which is now clearly the precedent all such judgements must be held against. The verdict after the appeal is probably closer to the mark than the original decision of a 3-0 forfeit. Having had a points deduction wiped away on appeal in the past, South Melbourne have learnt the lesson that the FFV in 2010 is a far different beast from its predecessors.

Which shouldn't have been difficult to work out, given that going into the start of the season three VPL clubs began the season on negative points. With Dandenong Thunder also being deducted points this week for abuse and threats directed at an assistant referee, there are now five of the twelve clubs who have less points in their tally than they have earned on the park. Does this make the competition a joke, as some claim? Or is the bigger joke the way some people feel they can act when they go to the football?

There are still many inequities and injustices in the way penalties have been applied. Points deductions being applied across whole clubs, affecting junior teams who had nothing to do with payments not made by the senior arm of the club. Pitch invaders being banned for life for confronting players, whilst a club official who entered the field of play and eventually struck a match official was only banned for two years.

Dandenong Thunder have also been ordered to play their next two home games behind closed doors. Playing games behind closed doors punishes as many innocent people (the opposition clubs supporters, for a start) as it does the guilty parties, and on top of a hefty monetary fine and the points deduction, does seem rather unnecessary.

The FFV Tribunal still has a long way to go before its decisions could be described as consistent. A brawl between supporters at a game between Nunawading City and Springvale City saw both clubs fined $1000. Someone was hospitalised and police were called in. Trying to make sense of it all really will give you a headache, so it's time to move on.

KRNCEVIC'S CRUNCHLINES

With Eddie Krnceanic

It certainly has been a bit of a busy football calendar of late as the Mad Month of May truly lives up to its name. I myself could give Eddie McGuire a run for his money for the Eddie Everywhere tag these days as I've had the pleasure of being invited to some very prominent events and functions since my last column.

Last Monday night I was a guest at the Johnny Warren Foundation Dinner that was held at Sofitel in Melbourne and enjoyed the company of many members of the Football Family. Like any family we are guilty of being dysfunctional at times, but this was an occasion when differences were put aside and the great man was honoured in a manner that was fitting to the type of human being he was.

No doubt, he would be quite chuffed looking down from football heaven, that his annual dinner also coincided with yet another anticipated appearance at a World Cup by his beloved Socceroos. Whoever would have thought that we would be entertaining such thoughts before his premature passing.

I also had the pleasure of being in attendance for the unveiling of a new synthetic pitch at Keilor Downs College. On both of these occasions I had the pleasure of being in the company of none other than Mark Viduka.

Although Mark and I both had spells at Dinamo Zagreb during our playing careers, we were obviously there at different times, and whilst our paths have crossed briefly previously, this week was the first time we could actually afford to further the acquaintance.

There is no denying that Mark was one of the most gifted footballers this country has ever seen, but furthermore, I was most impressed that the man actually lived up to his reputation.

Many times I have met great footballers who have been a disappointment outside of the realms of the football field, but my respect for Mark has grown ten-fold after getting to know him on a more personable level.

For someone who has achieved so much he is quite the humble man, and I was most impressed with the manner he made himself available to the students at Keilor Downs. I lost count how many autographs he signed, and it was great to see how excited the children were to have a genuine superstar in their midst.

I also had the pleasure of being invited to attend the opening of the Global Game Photographic Exhibition at the MCG on Thursday, which featured numerous football images from the Laurie Schwab and Les Shorrock collection.

It was great to see Les at the event, even though he's not as mobile as he once was, and receive the kind of recognition that has been long overdue.

The images are quite fascinating and are akin to time capsules that have recorded moments in time of our football history.

It is only until now that the people of the higher echelons of Australian football realise what a great deed football disciples like Les were actually sowing all those years ago, when he went to matches with camera in hand and captured the goings on of what some described the backwaters of Australian sport.

These were the times when football in this country was considered, to borrow a line from John Warren, merely a past time for wog, sheilas and poofers. I think these three events over the last week really indicated to me how much our football culture has matured and come of age.

It's what Johnny would have wanted...

A guide to successful cheating

AFTER years of careful and considered research I am pleased to announce that clubs in Victoria can apply a formula to cheat the system and succeed.

In what may well be a first for the code in this country GW's longitudinal study into corruption in our sport has unearthed a regular occurrence of unethical and illegal behaviour that Football Federation Victoria and big brother Football Federation Australia appear powerless to halt.

We have scrutinised countless FFV and FFA tribunal decisions, read copious amounts of material on FFA regulations and FFV's rules of competition and have arrived at a sure-fire recipe for deciding promotion and relegation issues.

Basically it all comes down to money. While that's no surprise, what we did find startling was the ease at which that money can be used to buy performance-enhancing and recreational drugs, bribe players at opposition clubs to make themselves unavailable and even play players registered under a false name without ever losing even one competition point.

Indeed, if our formula is strictly applied then it ensures that three precious matchpoints will be yours and no-one will do anything about it.

You can celebrate in style be it a successful promotion campaign or having successfully escaped the dreaded drop to a lower league.

Now that I have your undivided attention please carefully read what follows, make notes if you like, or simply marvel at the simplicity of the formula and the certainty of success that it brings. The exclusive GW formula is displayed at Figure 1.1. The formula is underpinned by Euclid's Parallel Postulate and for those non-Euclideans out there you can stop reading now and be forever condemned to football mediocrity.

Let's break down this formula into its component parts starting with Drugs (Money + No testing):

The money factor in this component is exponential so the more money you invest the greater return you receive, not just in terms of winning promotion or avoiding relegation but in an ongoing multiplier effect that carries on into seasons to come. Look at in terms of a sound investment in your club's successful onfield future.

Both FFA and FFV embrace a 'rigorous' anti-drugs policy approved by the

Drugs (Money + No testing) x Bribery (Player/Official + No investigation) x Fraud (False registration + No points penalty) = Promotion/Avoiding relegation

Powerful wog club x corruption x VSF investigation = stick it where it fits

World Anti-Doping Agency (WADA) but here's the rub – the Australian Sports and Drug Administration (ASADA) which conducts testing of athletes has a user-pays deal with FFA.

ASADA only receives federal government funding to conduct roughly 4500 tests a year across all sports and given the number of athletes in competition in Australia, the testing body is often forced to concentrate on testing elite athletes.

The bottom line is this: FFA funds testing of A-League players. Funding outside the national competition is left in the hands of state and territory bodies. And guess what? FFV can't afford to conduct tests.

And there's even better news for players that use alcohol. WADA's prohibitive substances list states that alcohol is only banned in competition in eight sports and football is not one of them.

Oh happy day! I mean, how hard is it to give your players performance-enhancing drugs? Okay, probably a tad harder than supplying them with recreational drugs or giving an opposition player a drinks card to his favourite venue on the night before a big game but what the hell. Who's gonna stop you? FFV ain't a problem, only Victoria Police (and the bribery component in our formula is flexible in that it doesn't just have to be applied to players and club officials).

Now to the second component of GW's remarkable formula for success: Bribery (Player/Official + No investigation):

Visa players are the easiest target here. They are not Australian citizens so they can't be locked in to staying with the club silly enough to land them on our shores under the misapprehension that they will stay with that club throughout the entire season.

That means that if they are playing in the Victorian Premier League or State One then they only can be signed by rival clubs within that level of competition during the transfer windows.

For clubs outside these two divisions those transfer windows don't apply so GW recommends you go to www.melbourneairport.com.au/Flight-Passenger-Info/ so that you can meet and greet the imports as they clear Customs and just when they are about to be greeted by the officials of the club that has supplied the approved documentation to Immigration, paid their airfare, arranged their accommodation and their job outside football you shout: "Hello, I'm from another club and we'll give you $100 more tax free to play with us but don't tell the ATO."

Our studies have shown that the use of this greeting is best applied outside earshot of the coaching staff and officials of the club that brought them out here in the first instance.

But even outside transfer windows (and this component of our formula here applies primarily to VPL and State One clubs) you can still offer visa players registered with an opposition club a truckload of money not to play with their club. Or even a few shekels more than their current club is paying them (cash only, of course). Our research shows that in most instances those visa players will accept your offer.

The really good news about this, from the perspective of clubs offering this bribe, is that FFV will deign this act to be a private matter and will do absolutely nothing to investigate and therefore potentially penalise your club. It's the foolproof element of this part of our for-mula's component that is most appealing. It is known in mathematical circles as 'the FFV effect'.

But you also can offer bribes to non-visa players. Throw a couple of hundred in their direction not to play against you, to feign injury or as an incentive to play well against another club in your league that stands in your way of either gaining promotion or avoiding relegation and our formula guarantees that there will be no FFV investigation or points penalty applied. The old FFV effect once more. It's a cracker.

And if you are really desperate you can make a substantial 'donation' to a rival club. Our research shows that dealing with the rival club's president is the most effective for it can be left to him or her to ensure that the coaching staff play the seniors in the reserves and vice-versa for the match round or rounds in question. Once again the FFV effect kicks in here ensuring that no investigation will take place hence no points penalty will be applied.

(Editor's note: The FFV effect was first discovered in the early 1960s under the term 'VSF effect'. It was stumbled onto by a now-deceased soccer journalist and the ground-breaking equation is displayed in Figure 1.2 in its original form which includes politically incorrect language that was in vogue during that era. GW does not condone the use of such language.)

The third and final component of our formula for success is: Fraud (False registration + No points penalty):

If a backpacker from Brazil rocks up to your training session and asks if he can join in, once he has dribbled past the entire first team squad, nutmegged every member of the coaching staff then tells you he just wants to play for fun he immediately becomes your new signing from Moonee Ponds. And yours is his first club. Ever. He only recently came out of a 25-year coma.

You can even hire him out to teams in other leagues as long as they register him under another name. The FFV effect is powerful but sometimes slip-ups happen and dual registrations are stumbled upon.

The last time it happened in a higher league though no points were deducted from the club that transgressed. Indeed you may even hear a tribunal member sum up the case with these words: "In a sense it's a victimless crime to play in two leagues that don't clash and don't play against each other."

This is what is known as 'the tribunal effect'. The dumbing-down nature of the tribunal effect combined with the three-blind-mice element of the FFV effect provide a powerful and effective barrier to any potential loss of points and all but ensure ongoing success for those clubs that rigidly apply our formula.

(Research Note: An unusual feature of the formula was the negative effect on the outcome of the equation whenever referees were introduced to any component part. That leads us to conclude that referees are an unstable element that should never be introduced to the formula.)

For clubs that plan to apply our formula we recommend that you use it sparingly in the first instance as it can heap financial stress on your club. We trialled our formula two seasons ago and both test clubs have won promotion in successive years and are now finding it increasingly difficult to finance the second component of our formula.

"It was okay for the first year when we won the league by 17 points and even last year when we clinched the title with seven rounds to go," said the president of one of our test clubs.

"But this year it's been a real eye-opener. We didn't realise that the higher up the leagues you go the more shenanigans that go on. We've been able to maintain our drugs budget but quite frankly we're finding it difficult to match the bribes of the bigger clubs."

In such instances we recommend that you only apply the formula for a handful of games, just enough to ensure that you stay in your league and live to cheat another day.

'DOPEY' DECISIONS BY WORLD CUP ELITE

By Leroy Robinson

The World Cup is under 3 weeks away. The 32 participants have all submitted their 30 man preliminary squads for the event in South Africa. Leaving aside the fact I was bemused by South Africa getting the tournament in the first place I was impressed by some of the stadia, albeit I've only seen all of them by playing FIFA World Cup 2010 on the Xbox 360.

The great thing about the game is you can choose your own squads, so in effect you become the puppet master. Some countries are in need of a helping hand in picking their squads more than others. Fabio Capello picked just about the best 30 he could have. The countries that could have done with the layman picking their squads are, strangely enough, the last three winners of the World Cup - Italy, Brazil and France.

In Italy their forward line has been described as the worst in the history of the Azzuri. Looking at the names it is hard not to disagree. With Antonio Di Natale, Alberto Gilardino, Gianpaolo Pazzini, Fabio Quagliarella and Giuseppe Rossi the hardest decision for Marcello Lippi could be who to include in the squad rather than who to leave out. If I'm Antonio Cassano, the Sampdoria forward, I'm a little upset there's no place for a guy who has 9 goals and 8 assists in 32 games. If you're Italian look on the bright side; there's no Luca Toni and if you can win the World Cup with him then you can win with the aforementioned motley crew.

As usual the Brazilian public are unhappy with their coach. Carlos Dunga announced his 30 and immediately announced which 23 from that lot had been included. It's Dunga's first (and hopefully his only) World Cup selection for a number of reasons. He really should have done what most other coaches have done and pick his 23 at the last possible moment. You never know when there are going to be injuries and if you're a player in the 30 you're good to go right up until the 23-man squad is announced. By reducing the 30 man-squad right away he's alienated the 7 he's left out. I'm informed that the nickname Dunga means Dopey in Brazil and like one of the seven dwarves he's lived up to his name.

More than that, say there's an injury at the very moment he is to formally submit the 23 to FIFA. Then he has to call up a player who isn't mentally prepared to be in the squad and who hasn't been given the time to bond with his teammates. He's also left an in-form Ronaldinho out of his final 23 whilst including Gilberto Silva, Julio Baptista, Kleber son and Grafite. Yet one player who has been left out of the 30 altogether is Alexandre Pato. He's coming off a less than stellar year for AC Milan blighted by loss of form and injury. And yet he's scored 12 goals in 23 starts for the Rossoneri.

Brazilian manager Dunga has shown his cards early on the World Cup table, albeit with some surprise selections. It remains to be seen if his decisions will uphold the 'jogo bonito' in South Africa.

Now I have nothing against Grafite or Baptista but Pato is a goal poacher with pace. Luis Fabiano will certainly start (if he recovers from injury) but in picking 31 year-old Grafite (11 goals in 30 starts) ahead of the 20 year-old he has shown up his lack of belief in the Milan striker. Nothing short of winning the World Cup (and in style) will suffice for him to keep his job.

One man who won't keep his job is Raymond Domenech. The Frenchman will be replaced by Laurent Blanc at the end of the World Cup but he isn't going without being his usual bizarre self. The squad includes Andre-Pierre Gignac a 24 year-old forward from Toulouse. Seeing how he's kept out Karim Benzema from the squad you'd think this guy is a goal machine. Think again. 8 goals from 31 games suggests that coach Domenech is suffering from that fatal disease outgoing coaches sometimes get - loss of plot. They do have Meanwhile, Raymond Domenech's tenure as France manager will probably be best remembered for bubble gum cards in a past life.

Thierry Henry, Nicolas Anelka and Sidney Govou. In other words the same cast of characters that failed at the 2008 European Championships. Nice one Raymond. Look for the French to struggle for goals in a group that includes Uruguay, South Africa and Greece. This talk of goals fits nicely into the central theme of the article. The lack of world-class strikers in the 2010 tournament.

Taking Italy as an example isn't a good idea because as I said they won the world cup with the equivalent of Eeyore from Winnie the Pooh. For a while now they've played with a five-man midfield (or 4-3-3 if you're an optimist) to compensate for their impotent frontline. However, in the past they've had a trequartista, a play-maker like Totti, Del Piero or Roberto Baggio to play behind a front two or lone striker. This time around they have no-one of any proven quality to take up the position. Then again they have also shown they don't mind taking a draw and going into extra time and penalties. It's typical that they have a group they could win blindfolded - with all due respect to Slovakia, New Zealand and Paraguay. Once they get into the knock-out stages have a case of Red Bull handy.

Brazil is a far better example of a nation with once great strikers that has fallen. Luis Fabiano is no doubt their number one goal scorer and yet he is a big lumbering centre forward who lacks technical ability but makes up for it by being an excellent finisher with head and feet. That said there's something very unBrazil-like about a target man. I don't know about you but I was brought up on Romario, Bebeto and Ronaldo so when I see Fabiano I want to boo his every touch. There's not much in reserve either with Nilmar being second choice by a long way.

For France read Italy. They did, after all, win the trophy with Christophe Dugarry in attack. The team was based around Henry, Zidane and Youri Djorkaeff with Dugarry being a lumbering distraction to keep the central defenders occupied. Since Zidane's retirement Les Bleus has been no more than an imitation of Italy.

My main problem with the lack of world class forwards is that more teams could be tempted to play one up front, flood the midfield and cancel each other out. I'm hoping that whatever formation the teams play we get an open and attacking tournament. Looking at the other squads we can say the best strikers are Wayne Rooney, Torres, Villa and Samuel Eto'o. Messi isn't a striker but even if he was it can be argued that truly world class players perform at all levels and his record is very poor. But what I do know? Look at the following stats and decide for yourself which players should be anointed with such praise.

Luis Fabiano
(36 games – 25 goals)
Samuel Eto'o
(95 games – 44 goals)
Wayne Rooney
(62 games – 25 goals)
Lionel Messi
(44 games – 13 goals)
Fernando Torres
(71 games – 23 goals)
David Villa
(55 games – 36 goals)

Arsenal runs out of Gas...

It has been less than two weeks since the conclusion of the English Premier League season, and already there appears to be some big transfer news which will have major ramifications for the next term. Cesc Fabregas, Arsenal captain and talisman, looks very much like he is on his way to Barcelona, his boyhood club. So what does this seemingly inevitable move mean for Arsenal and England, and for Barcelona and Spain?

I would like to say that I fully intended on averting my gaze from the Premier League this week, and perhaps look at the preliminary England squad for the upcoming World Cup. However, as I pointed out above, in the last couple of days rumours and half-facts concerning what could be the biggest transfer of the whole off-season, from an Arsenal perspective of course, has shaken my resolve and brought me right back to talking about the top division of English football.

It appears that Cesc Fabregas is on his way to Barcelona, before even one ball is kicked in this summer's World Cup. At the time of this article being written no deal has been finalised or even any actual offer from the Catalan giants confirmed, but from the rampant speculation both on television sports channels and from the internet media, it seems that Cesc will be on his way in the next few days. Obviously, there is still a small possibility that the little genius may be blocked from going by Arsenal, or there may be problems with forging a deal, but these seem highly unlikely. So assuming that the move goes ahead the question that needs to be asked is simply what would this mean for the Gunners, and what would Barcelona be getting for their euros?

Well first let's look at the deal from the Spanish side. Cesc is an amazing athlete, first and foremost, and works hard in every game in the centre of midfield. He is a terrific passer, has great movement, and can chip in with goals, as he did this season with Arsenal. He will also slot with ease into the style that Barcelona play, as it is a style not too dissimilar to the way he has been playing his whole career at Arsenal, which was or course the style he first learned at Barcelona as a teenager. At Barca he would be playing alongside, or in place of, players like Xavi and Iniesta, two of the greatest midfielders in the world, and he would have the likes of Messi, probably the best player on the planet, and Ibrahimovic ahead of him. Plus, it looks like Barca have also secured the signing of La Liga's top scorer for the season just ended, David Villa from Valencia, who himself was one of Spain's best players at the last European Championships, which of course Spain won at a seeming canter.

And from the man in question's point of view the move makes sense as well. Fabregas has always suggested that he would like to move back to his boyhood club where he began his footballing career. He will have the chance to be part of what could be one of the best footballing dynasties ever seen, in an era which is arguably best period of Barcelona's storied history.

Much like Ronaldo's move to Madrid seemed to grow more inevitable with every passing season, Arsenal fans always knew this day would come, and their captain would want to go back to his hometown, and right now seems to be the perfect time for him. From where he stands, and from where Barca are right now, it seems like a great fit.

Whether it can be said that this deal is good for Arsenal all depends on what deal is actually done. Initially it was rumoured that Arsenal would be getting £20 million for Cesc, plus Yaya Toure, brother of former Arsenal and now Manchester City defender Kolo. There were also initial reports of the Gunners being paid somewhere in the region of £40 million in bulk for the services of their captain. If either of these deals see the light of day then I think the Arsenal fans shouldn't be too disappointed. Of course, losing your club captain, who happens to be your driving force, best player and inspiring leader, is not the best thing in the world, and I'm sure all fans would want him to stay. But this has happened before, as Thierry Henry, the best ever player at Arsenal, as well as being the best player that has graced the Premiership, moved to Barcelona from the Gunners whilst he was captain and the top man at the club, and Arsenal managed to cope, and managed to progress.

As when Henry left, and in fact also when Adebayor left at the end of the 08-09 season, naysayers are already predicting that the loss of their best player will be curtains for Arsenal's Champions League push next season, let alone their title challenge, yet as they have done before the Gunners can cope. Already Arsenal themselves have made moves in the transfer market, looking to bring in Marouane Chamakh, a highly rated forward from Bordeaux, and with the funds they get from the Fabregas move their can bring in even more talent. Plus, in Aaron Ramsey the Gunners have a player who resembles the young Spaniard in so many ways, and if he can get over his horrific injury he sustained earlier this year then he may be able to step up into the boots of the soon to be former Arsenal captain. And if the Gunners can bring in two or three more new faces, which they should have the money to do, I can still see them challenging for all the honours next season, as of course Barcelona will undoubtedly do also.

So if that is what this move means for the clubs involved, what does it mean for the two national leagues that these clubs represent?

I have often said that I believe that the English Premier League is the best in the world, but La Liga is certainly very close. In fact, many people consider the Spanish top flight to be drastically better than what England has to offer, which seems to be supported by recent transfer dealings by clubs from these respective nations. I pointed out earlier that it seemed inevitable that Ronaldo was going to move to Real Madrid, just as Fabregas was always going back to Barca. And in recent years it seems much of the top talent around the world is being attracted to the Spanish league. Rumours are forever circulating that Rooney, Torres, Lampard or Arshavin are on their way to La Liga, and players like David Villa and Franck Ribery seem to be opting for Madrid or Barcelona rather than Manchester or Liverpool.

However, the fact that more of the top players in the world would rather play in Spain than in England does not to me equate to La Liga being better than the Premier League. Despite all the big names that went to Real Madrid last season, they failed to win the league, and they did not come anywhere near winning the Champions League. And although Barcelona demolished an English team in the competition, they too did not take home Europe's top club prize. The point I am making is that just because some top players want to play in La Liga does not automatically make it the best league. Of course, I have no problem with someone saying that they prefer the Spanish top division to the English one, but I simply do not buy the argument that La Liga is better.

In my opinion, La Liga is much more akin to the Scottish Premier League than the English one. I know that sounds a little crazy, but what I mean is that both leagues are so tremendously top heavy. In Scotland there is Rangers and there is Celtic, in Spain there is Barcelona and there is Real Madrid, and not a whole lot else. It can be said that Chelsea and United dominate English football in the same way, but I do not see it like that, as Liverpool and Arsenal have also seriously contended for silverware in the last few seasons, and furthermore the Premier League mid-table are also quite capable of beating the top English teams on numerous occasions, as has been shown this season.

The English Premier League is more competitive, both in terms of league standings and in the actual football matches themselves, and for my money if more exciting too. And if we look at the facts the English Premier League is the most watched league around the world, easily, which surely makes it if not the best then certainly the biggest. Therefore, at least in my opinion, any nationalistic debate about which league is better cannot simply be settled by suggesting that the best players are all moving to Spain, because that's just half the story.

Either way, both La Liga and the Premier League are great leagues to watch, and are great leagues to play in for players from around the globe, and I'm certain that the Arsenal captain will enjoy plying his trade in Spain as much as he did in North London.

So all that is left is to wish Cesc the best of luck at his new club, and of course the best of luck to the Arsenal team that he leaves behind him. And by the way, how is this for an early prediction; Cesc and Barcelona against Arsenal and Arsene Wenger in next years Champions League final. Now wouldn't that be a mouth-watering prospect for all Gooners around the world.

Green Gully Show nominated for award

The Green Gully Soccer Show is in the running to pick up an Antenna Award. The long running show, which airs every Saturday morning at 10.30am on Melbourne's Channel 31, has been nominated in the Outstanding Sports Program category along with The Local Footy Show, Golf Zone, The Ten Pin Bowling Show and KO Boxing.

The Antenna Awards showcase outstanding achievement in locally produced programs which are broadcast on Community TV stations across Australia.

The 2010 Awards will be held at BMW Edge, Federation Square on the 27th of June. The Awards will be broadcast live on C31 Melbourne and Geelong.

"On behalf of the Green Gully Soccer Club, many thanks to the endless volunteer hours of travel, inspiration, commentating and fun, from everyone who has contributed and assisted the show over the past 6-7 years!", said The GG Show's Markian Jaworsky.

According to the official Australian ratings figures "The Oztams", the show averages about 15,000 viewers.

What kinda crazy will Maradona get up to during this World Cup?

The World Cup hype and coverage has been ramped up to overdrive this week. The announcement of the World Cup player squads, the World Cup themed TV advertisements and the end of the European football seasons has put the World Cup in South Africa front and centre of the crazy and casual football fans consciousness.

To get in the mood I have been reading and watching World Cup related books and films.

I am in the middle of reading the excellent Maradona biography by Jimmy Burns one of the best football writers around. The book is called "The Hand of God - The Life of Maradona" and delves into Maradona's personal and football life and as one reviewer put it, 'Few people emerge innocent in this book.'

Maradona's Exclusion from Argentina's 1978 WC Squad

What I found really eye opening was Maradona's exclusion from the 1978 World Cup Argentinian squad. Argentina went on to win that World Cup in Argentina. In the background of that triumph a Military Junta ran the country.

Here is an extract from the book on why then Argentine coach Luis Menotti didn't pick the then 17 year old Maradona for the 1978 World Cup squad:

"Menotti told me he didn't pick Maradona because he believed he was still too young, both physically and emotionally, to deal with possible defeat - an assessment which appears at first sight to have been confirmed by Maradona's reaction to his exclusion."

'For the child prodigy who had for so many years been bent on winning the approval of his elders, the feeling of rejection by this latest of a series of father figures in his life was profoundly shocking. Without waiting for Menotti's explanation, Maradona locked himself out and wept uncontrollably.'

'He vowed never to forgive Menotti for the betrayal and to quit football altogether.'

'According to witnesses who monitored the Argentine team closely at the time, Menotti had other, more personal reasons for excluding Maradona. A man of enormous ego, he was obsessed with the glory that victory would bring, and feared that any rival would eclipse him.....that friendly against Hungary in which he had found himself almost bulldozed into bringing out the young player to the tribal cry of "Maradoona, Maradoona."

Lucky for fans of the beautiful game Maradona didn't quit football and we all know the rest of the story. Reading on I found this next extract very engaging. Aside from the Military Junta exploiting the victory for political gain that accompanied Argentina's World Cup victory in 1978 there where question marks over how the victory was achieved.

"One medical source told me that in 1978 the 'whole of Argentine football was doping itself.....I started a big fight to break the trend.' Argentina had players who had been regularly provided with amphetamines while playing for their league teams, and who found in World Cup a suitably lax regime when it came to urine samples.

'According to other reports Mario Kempes and Alberto Tarantino were so "high" after playing one particular World Cup match that they had to keep on going for another hour before they came down again.

'One of the most extraordinary episodes of the World Cup involved the pregnant wife of the Argentine's team waterboy. Her urine was used as a cover for an Argentine's player's in one of the competition dopes test.'

Maradona's Expulsion from World Cup USA '94

Speaking of doping and Argentinian football I also watched a documentary called Maradona by Kusterica. In a revealing interview Maradona had this to say about his well documented drug use.

'For 20 years during Havelange's (former FIFA boss from Brazil) presidency Brazil did not win the World Cup. You know why? The man up there is just. The old man loves justice! If for 20 years a mafioso was unable to win the World Cup, kind of tough isn't it? (Maradona makes a gesture where he points to his right eye)

'I'm going to tell you the story. Argentina was eliminated from the World Cup (in 1994). We went to play Australia. It was a tie 1-1. We came back here and we qualified 1-0. There was no doping case (Maradona shakes his finger) No drugs not over there, not over here. There was no ephedrine over there or over here. No cocaine over there or over here. During the World Cup after we beat Nigeria 2-1 they said: "They're screwing us up." (Maradona was kicked out of USA 94 after the Nigeria game)

"I'd say Havelange is the arms dealer, and Blatter sells the bullets" (both

Maradona by Kusturica

Maradona and Kusterica laugh after this quote.

On his fight against Cocaine addiction:

"Scoring a goal in front of 100,000 people, like I did with the English for example, was for me a normal thing. It was my game, my life. When I came down, I was like everyone, all of you. And I could talk to you. What messed me up was cocaine. But I was just like you. However when you let the tiger out, when I went onto the pitch, I was in command."

"Emir do you know what a player I'd have been if I hadn't taken coke? (he puts his hand together in a prayer gesture) What a player we lost! It's like a bad aftertaste. I could have been much more than I am. Yes. Really it's true. I was born into football. I knew who I was going to be. But I didn't know I was going to take coke."

World Cup 2010

I can't wait to see what kinda crazy Maradona will get up to during this World Cup. The final Argentinian 23 man World Cup squad was already announced before the June 1 deadline. Maradona will be coaching the side this time and the World Cup will be better for his crazy side line antics.

Final Argentina Squad for South Africa

Goalkeepers: Sergio ROMERO, Mariano ANDUJAR, Diego POZO

Defenders: Nicolas BURDISSO, Clemente RODRIGUEZ, Martin DEMICHELIS, Ariel GARCE, Gabriel HEINZE, Nicolas OTAMENDI, Walter SAMUEL

Midfielders: Jonas GUTIERREZ, Javier MASCHERANO, Juan Sebastian VERON, Angel DI MARIA, Mario BOLATTI, Maxi RODRIGUEZ, Javier PASTORE

Forwards: Lionel MESSI, Gonzalo HIGUAIN, Carlos TEVEZ, Diego MILITO, Sergio AGUERO, Martin PALERMO

Me, I am tipping Argentina to beat Brazil in the final.

Married: Engaged to girlfriend of 5 yrs, Lisa
Car: V8 VT Commodore
Nickname: Don't really have one. Bro mostly or Brods
Previous clubs: Woden Valley, Canberra Olympic and currently Goulburn Strikers
Representative honours: ACT Youth Rockets 2005
Childhood football hero: Paul Scholes
Favourite o's player: Mikeal Arteta-Xavi Hernandez
Fav HAL player: Jason Cullina
Fav former Socceroo: Mark Viduka
Fav current Socceroo: Tim Cahill
Most memorable match as a player: Winning a Tiger Turf Cup game in extra time 5-4, and another Tiger Turf Cup win over Macarthur Rams after penalties, the feeling amongst the team after those victories was great.
Most memorable match as a fan: Watching the LA Galaxy vs Sydney FC game was unreal. Seeing David Beckham play was great! I remember all the Sydney fans were giving it to him and then he scored his free kick and they all went nuts even though he was playing for the other team. The roof came off the place when he scored it was great.
Most memorable goal you've scored: I've scored twice from halfway before and those are really special but I scored the winner in the tiger turf cup game that also gave me a hat-trick. After that goal I felt unbelievable. The goal I scored in this years Federation Cup Final I will always remember as it was our teams first appearance in a major final in the ACT.
Earliest football memory: A school game that we won 4 or 5-0. It was my first game and I played sweeper.
Funniest moment in football: In a school game we had a guy that wasn't the best soccer player but always gave 100%. He came on late in one of the games and hit a volley from the edge of the box and scored. Everyone was amazed and just starting laughing as if to say 'no way he just did that'. It was great.
Biggest disappointment: Giving away a two goal start to Canberra FC and going on to lose Federation Cup Final. That would have really turned some heads in Canberra if we could've held on to that lead.
Worst injury: I tore my hamstring all but away from the bone in a high school game and was on crutches for a couple of weeks and it put me out for around two months.
Most difficult opponent: Canberra FC without a doubt. They are the benchmark side and twice we've held 2-0 leads but haven't come away with a win against them yet. They have a lot of experience coupled with decently young players. They are well drilled and are very hard to break down.
Fav away ground: I like McKellar (Belconnen Blue Devils) its surface is like carpet and great to play on but I haven't played there in a while. Deakin Stadium (Canberra FC) is another ground with a great surface, they both allow you to get your head up a lot earlier because the roll of the ball is true 99% of the time.
Superstitions: None really, but I've learnt if you hit the post three times in a game its just not your day.
Typical game day meal: I eat pasta most times or chicken. With yogurt or muesli bar before the game.
What are your strengths: I run the 100 in about 11.5 seconds so no doubt my speed gets me into a lot of good positions. I can read the game well and have a powerful shot. My delivery of the ball from the set piece is also very good. My strike rate is high, I don't need a lot of chances to net a goal. I know where the goal is and have found that is a huge advantage against better defenders when you have less time to get a shot in.
What are your weaknesses: I'm not the best in the air but have scored a few headers. That would be the worst part of my game for sure. Mentally I'm learning to be stronger and to learn there will always be another chance. I feel that missed opportunities are chances to put the team ahead and it used to get me down.
Favourite team when growing up: Everton FC
Fav other sports: I don't mind a bit of cricket and I follow the NBA pretty closely too.
Fav other sportsman: I think Ricky Ponting is a great leader and I like watching him play. Kobe Bryant is a freak and he's great to watch.
Fav foods: Baked Dinners, Burritos, Lasagne, spaghetti bolognese.
Fav actor/actress: Denzel Washington is a great actor I like him, and Scarlett Johansson because she's a good sort.
Hobbies: Soccer-watching/playing, Building things, basketball, Call of Duty
Fav holiday resort: The Crown Towers Resort on the Gold Coast is really nice, only a street from the beach. Top spot.
Fav nightspot: My place on the lounge watching Premier league is fine for me most weekends, otherwise it's the club here every now and then.
Ideal date: A night in winter in front of the fire with a good movie sounds alright, or a nice restaurant.
Fav tv shows: Family Guy for sure I could watch that all day. Mythbusters is cool too.
Fav music: Red Hot Chilli Peppers have heaps of good stuff. Phoenix and Bloc Party, too. Anything catchy in most cases.

Bronx Goulburn Strikers FC

Fav film: The Wrong Man, Superbad is hilarious so is 40 yr old Virgin.

Last soccer shirt you bought: I just got 2 new Everton retro shirts from England two wks ago. A 1982 League shirt and a 1985 Cup Winners Cup shirt.

League shirt and a 1985 Cup Winners Cup shirt. Funniest rumour you've heard about yourself: I haven't heard any, that's not to say there's not any BIGGEST INFLUENCE ON YOUR CAREER: I have to say my love for the game is the biggest influence on me. I want to be playing when I'm 50 - even after that. By then I will have lost a bit of pace though, maybe goalkeeper will be a good position for me then.

BIGGEST DRAG IN SOCCER: Pre-season runs and sprints up Rocky Hill are killers (thanks Daniel!), but I

Football ambition: I want to play at a higher level, whether it be in the A-League or overseas. I know I can be good enough and can only keep playing at my best to give myself the best opportunity and

Who knows who'll be watching.
Which person in the world would you most like to meet: David Moyes and Sir Alex Ferguson, for sure.

Tip for this year's World Cup: I think this is England's best chance to win in a long time so my money will be on them. Brazil, Argentina and all the usual suspects should be there come crunch time.

Following the 2006 FIFA World Cup, Sunshine Coast football enjoyed some of the most significant growth in player numbers within Queensland. Growth has occurred across all sectors of the game but particularly in younger players and females. It became obvious that despite the marketing and development programs being very successful in increasing the number of players entering the code, there was still a need to provide development opportunities for elite players.

Noel Woodall (Managing Director, Sunshine Coast FC Pty Ltd)

has been a strong supporter of the new QSL. As a professional statewide league, the QSL presents an opportunity for regional elite players to show case their skills. As such, the QSL will provide pathways not previously available to Qld players seeking advancement in their football career. Sunshine Coast FC Pty Ltd was established in 2007 by Noel Woodall to provide Sunshine Coast players with this opportunity.

The success of the club to date can be measured by its successon the playing field. In the inaugural Hyundai QSL season in

2008, the Men's FIRE Team won

McLaren bows out on a winning note

By Jarrod Ellis

Round 9 of the Hyundai QSL kicked off on Saturday night with three games taking place. Cellar dwellers Bundaberg Spirit hosted FNQ Bulls, perhaps the longest road-trip undertaken in any state league, whilst both Whitsunday Miners and Capricorn Cougars were hoping to re-enter the winners circle in their match in Glenella.

The standout fixture though was the clash between Brisbane Strikers and the NQ Razorbacks at Perry Park. Competition powerhouse Brisbane have struggled the past two round, securing only a single point whilst the visitors from Townsville have been in irresistible form, putting five goals past Bundaberg and Capricorn in the past fortnight.

Despite displaying such attacking potency the Razorbacks defence has been the cornerstone of their season so far and it was clear from the beginning of the match against Brisbane that they intended to rely on that strength once again.

After having an early chance that saw Brett Hay strike the ball into the arms of Brendan White from inside the area, the Razorbacks were content to sit back and let Brisbane come at them.

The Strikers were happy to accept the challenge and stroked the ball about the park trying to find an opening in the visitors defence. Brisbane regularly looked out wide to their fullbacks, attempting to work their way around a packed defence.

This tactic didn't prove too successful and with their wide men struggling to get behind the opposition and provide quality crosses scoring chances were at a premium. A goal was to arrive just before half-time though and it was no real surprise that it was a result of play through the middle of the park instead of out wide that finally broke the deadlock.

Five minutes before half-time Sean Burke and Matt Thurtell played the ball between them before Burke unleashed Thurtell with an excellent weighted pass that saw him clear on the right of the Razorbacks penalty area. NQ keeper Kieran Gonzalez raced out towards Thurtell as he bore down on goal but the young forward slotted the ball into the net from a tight angle to give his side the lead going into the break.

The second half saw a much more adventurous Razorbacks side emerge from the dressing rooms. The visitors were perhaps unlucky not to draw level in the 52nd minute when David Mayes wasted a good chance.

From there the Razorbacks had the better of proceedings, surging forward in an attempt to find an equaliser whilst having to defend desperately against some quality counter-attacking from Brisbane.

Brisbane's defenders were in a miserly mood though after a disappointing fortnight and they held firm against the North Queenslanders, Matija Simic and Jason Shade putting in solid performances at the back.

The score remained unchanged all the way into injury time, even Razorbacks centre-half Jacob Timpano was unable to get his side on the scoresheet, seeing a shot saved by White after joining the attack for the visitors.

The match ended 1-0 giving outgothis season will bring any happiness for the QSL minnows.

The shock result of the round was without a doubt the 5-2 mauling that Whitsunday Miners inflicted upon Capricorn Cougars.

Despite being below the Cougars on the ladder and playing at home many QSL followers expected the Capricorn side to at least secure a point against a Miners team that was well beaten by QAS last weekend.

Ben Schaper struck first for the home side in the 25th minute after a period of good play from the home side and that was enough to see them lead at the break.

The second half provided much more entertainment for the neutrals as the ball hit the back of the net six times, the first of which was attributed to the Cougar's Robert Lupton. Only three minutes later the visitors were ahead as Fergus McIntosh capitalised on some lax defending from the Miners.

Going behind appeared to spur the home side on and as the flurry of goal mouth activity continued they were back in the lead only twelve minutes later courtesy of Schaper and Tyson Masters.

Masters, who has been in good form the past few rounds, bagged a second towards the end of the match and Corey Hooper scored his sides' fifth as they completed their comeback to crush the Cougars.

In the final game to complete the round, the Sunshine Coast Fire continued its unbeaten start to the season with a hard-fought 3-2 win over the QAS, where Tyson Holmes played his 50th game for the club.

Leaders toppled in round of surprises

By Mike Salter

On a weekend where several of the top teams were brought down to earth, Marconi retained a comfortable lead at the top of the NSW Premier League table despite suffering a shock home loss to the South Coast Wolves on Saturday evening. Although Marconi opened the scoring just after the half-hour, the men from Wollongong equalised quickly, and Mark Picciolini, one of the revelations of the season, sealed the three points for Trevor Morgan's team with eleven minutes to go.

In Saturday night's other fixture, the Sutherland Sharks continued their excellent recent run with a 4-1 thrashing of the West Sydney Berries. Sutherland thus remain in the top five, although they are still four points adrift of fourth-placed Blacktown.

Sutherland were the only team in the top five to gain the full three points. Blacktown were surprisingly defeated 2-0 at home by Manly United in the latter's first game without long-serving coach Phil Moss on the bench. Bonnyrigg, meanwhile, squandered a two-goal lead to draw 2-2 with APIA-Leichhardt. Details of that one can be found below.

Rockdale stayed in contention for a finals place with an important 1-0 win over their hosts Bankstown in the "Macedonian derby", while Sydney United and Sydney Olympic played out a 1-1 draw in front of a passionate crowd at Edensor Park. The hosts' defender Damon Collina was controversially sent off six minutes before the close.

APIA-Leichhardt 2-2 Bonnyrigg White Eagles

A late fightback from APIA-Leichhardt brought them a deserved point at Leichhardt Oval, stretching their undefeated run to five, as Brian Brown's Bonnyrigg side let a 2-0 lead slip in the final ten minutes.

Despite APIA's superb recent run, the visitors started confidently. APIA's attack suffered from the absence of the inventive Franco Parisi, who was absent on an overseas business trip.

Bonnyrigg had a good claim for a penalty after only five minutes when Jamie McMaster looked to have been impeded by John Kelso in the box; referee Kris Griffiths-Jones waved the play on. A minute later, Bonnyrigg's top scorer Brad Boardman received the ball in the box after a fine run down the left by young David Gullo, but Boardman could only squeeze his shot wide.

APIA's first shot in anger came in the 11th minute, when Nick Rizzo, filling in for Parisi up front, sent in a right-footed volley which Nenad Vekic did very well to save. Soon afterwards, Stephen Kayes motored past Milan Zoric on the APIA right, but his cut-back eluded the APIA forward line. APIA were reminded of Daniel Severino's dead-ball prowess on 25 minutes, when the Bonnyrigg man whistled a free kick just over the bar from 20 yards.

Bonnyrigg went ahead just after the half-hour, inevitably through the powerful Boardman. Gullo once again tricked his way down the left flank and crossed accurately, and Boardman slipped ahead of his man at the near post to send an angled header past Matthew Nash in the APIA goal.

It was Severino's deadly left foot that nearly helped to put the visitors two in front on 37 minutes; following a half-chance for Rizzo at the other end, Severino sent in an inswinging, dipping corner from the right which Zoric headed fractionally wide of the post.

Former Adelaide United striker Robbie Younis came to the fore just before the break. He sent a cross-shot past Vekic but wide of goal in the 44th minute, and then set up Kayes for a powerful shot from the right, which Vekic pushed aside for a corner. When the ball came back into play, Kayes found room for a shot again, and this time Paul Cotte managed to block on the line, with Vekic out of the picture.

APIA continued to push forward in the second period, and Younis missed an excellent chance on 49 minutes, shanking a left-footed shot wide when a ball from the right had run through to him in the six-yard area. This, however, was not as embarrassing as the miss by David D'Apuzzo seven minutes later. The former Central Coast Mariner was left with an open goal to tap into when Kayes hit the right-by-line and centred smartly; to the horror of the home fans, D'Apuzzo sliced the ball wide. Younis then squandered another chance to equalise, taking too long over a shot from a partly-cleared free kick and thereby allowing Bonnyrigg to get bodies in the way.

On 65 minutes, Bonnyrigg made the hosts pay for these missed opportunities, when a free kick from deep on the right by Severino entered a crowded area; Boardman rose highest, and placed a header neatly past Nash.

Thirteen minutes later, with APIA not looking likely to reduce the deficit, Bonnyrigg substitute Graham Forbes had gone off the field for treatment following a collision, and on his re-entry he was immediately involved in a chase with APIA's Anthony Hartshorn. The struggling Bonnyrigg man lost out, and put in a desperate foul as Hartshorn closed in on difficult, save from the APIA gloveman.

And so, on 82 minutes, the game turned. A free kick which the Bonnyrigg defence failed to clear reached APIA defender Mark Byrnes on the edge of the area, and the former Melbourne Victory man fired a low left-footed shot past Vekic and in.

APIA began to look more dangerous, and on 88 minutes came their lifeline. Bonnyrigg substitute Graham Forbes had gone off the field for treatment following a collision, and on his re-entry he was immediately involved in a chase with APIA's Anthony Hartshorn. The struggling Bonnyrigg man lost out, and put in a desperate foul as Hartshorn closed in on goal. Penalty, and a straight red for Forbes.

Rizzo took the kick, and although Vekic perceptively dived to his right to save, the ball was tucked away by another APIA substitute, Bishara Stephan.

Amazingly, APIA went very close to snatching all three points in injury time. A header from Rizzo forced a superb fingertip save from Vekic, and in the final minute of added time it was Rizzo again, shooting just wide from 20 yards.

2-2 it finished, a heartening result for APIA but a great disappointment for title-chasing Bonnyrigg.

Melbourne Knights Champions Reunite

After a successful reunion gala night, the Melbourne Knights football club opened their doors once more on a glorious sunny Sunday as all remaining plans were put into place as the club looked forward to relive some of the fame and passion on the field just like in the glory days during the National Soccer League.

After a number of decades, the Melbourne Knights football club has always been seen as a club with vast passion, pride and character which has established the club with a proud tradition and heritage, and last Sunday the Melbourne Knights football club proved its passion by bringing back some of the Croatian community together to support one of the most memorable moments in the Knights proud history as the 1994/1995 championship winning NSL side took on the 1995/1996 championship side in front of a bumper crowd at Knights Stadium.

Last Sunday also saw the Knights have all their teams playing at home and it ranged right from the under 8's through to the seniors. The day's proceedings kicked off with the juniors who walked away and achieved fantastic results throughout the course of the morning and early afternoon.

The Knights women's team also played their first game on the main ground and marched away with yet another fantastic result beating the Yarra Jets 8-0 and they sit in a comfortable second position on the ladder. The game was followed on by the Melbourne Knights youth team who snatched a late winner in the final 10 seconds of the game to beat Green Gully's youth 3-2 and really warmed the crowd as kick off for championship showdown loomed. The Knights seniors who had a disappointing 1-0 defeat played no impact, as the day was about celebrations and the proud history and glory of the ageing Melbourne Knights football club.

As the major draw card of the day, the championship match was right around the corner, people flocked Knights Stadium to witness a piece of memorable history as the Knights golden generation stepped out onto the pitch for the first time since they won the National Soccer League in consecutive years.

The crowd saw players such as Spiteri, Tiatto, Juric, Podeljak, Horvat and Buljubasic all take stage to battle and to have the honor of being named the best NSL championship winning side. Billy Vojtek took charge of the 1994/95 side as Mirko Bacic unfortunately missed out due to Visa complication from Croatia and Ian Dobson stepped up once again to coach the 1995-96 side. Legendary Australian referee Chris Bambridge kicked off the game and a massive roar and energy broke out within the 2500 nostalgic supporters.

A real buzz surrounded the stadium as the players entertained the crowd both comically and professionally as the quality of football might have been a touch slower; however it seemed to be still at a very high standard. The game which was free flowing soon saw its first goal as Melbourne Victory Midfielder Tom Podeljak buried the ball in the back of the net to send the crowd into raptures as the 96 side took the lead.

Nevertheless the likes of Oliver Podeljak and Mark Cilic combining and soon the 95 side found themselves an equalizer just before half time as a slick pass from Mark Silic found Josip Biskic and he went on to beat Vilson Knezevic in goals to level the scores at 1-1.

Soon after half time the 96 side found themselves up 2-1 courtesy of an Adrian Cervinski strike. The crowds cheered their heroes and as everyone was thinking that the 96 side would take home the glory Joe Spiteri found himself with a lucky rebound ball and calmly slotted the ball past Knezevic to level the scores at 2-2 and soon after the final whistle was blown leaving both sides as equal champions.

The players were given a standing ovation walking off the field by all the supporters as they marched off the ground for the final time in front of their passionate fans and families leaving Melbourne Croatia Soccer club on a proud high.

Olympia Warriors desperately unlucky

By Walter Pless

Olympia Warriors, languishing in last place on the Forestry Tasmania Southern Premier League ladder, were desperately unlucky not to beat sixth-placed New Town Eagles away at Clare Street on Saturday.

Olympia hit the Eagles woodwork three times and also missed a couple of open goals as they fought to secure their first win of the season.

It is the club's 50th anniversary this season and they have just three points from 10 outings.

They are staring relegation in the face and that would hardly be a cause for celebration. They have already postponed their anniversary dinner until March next year.

Olympia almost took the lead in the 10th minute when a cross from deep on the right was met by new signing Alex Nandan at the far post, but his shot hit the far upright.

Two minutes later, Eagles hit the front after a quick counter-attack. Alex Leszczynski crossed from the byline on the left and prolific scorer Adam McKewen rifled the ball home from the edge of the box.

The goal took McKewen's tally to nine and he is now the equal top marksman in the competition, together with Ben Crosswell of Tilford Zebras and Jonathon Lo of South Hobart.

The visitors were level 50 seconds into the second half. Ben Phillips crossed low from the right and, when Eagles goalkeeper and captain Nathan Pitchford fumbled the ball, Kosta Grillas was on hand to prod it home.

In the 69th minute, substitute Aaron Percy rattled the Eagles crossbar with a mighty shot, while two minutes later, Olympia's Adam Hedge missed an open goal, sending his shot from Grillas's left-wing cross over the bar.

Lee Mason almost gave Olympia the lead shortly after when he broke through the Eagles rearguard and got in a strike at goal, but the ball hit the underside of the bar and bounced down and back into play, where it was headed clear by defender Andrew Clark.

Eagles then rallied and almost grabbed a late winner. Olympia goalkeeper Dmitri Nester did well to turn a McKewen header against the bar. The ball rebounded to Alex Leszczynski, whose follow-up shot was deflected by Nester against the chest of team-mate Mason and out of play.

Eagles claimed the ball had crossed the line, but referee Kim Barker waved play on.

Leszczynski also sent a powerful shot just wide of the angle of crossbar and post, but neither side could break the deadlock and had to be content with a share of the points.

Third-ranked Tilford Zebras drew level on 17 points with second-placed Glenorchy Knights when they beat fourth-ranked Kingborough Lions United 4-2 away at Lightwood Park.

Jayden Welch fired Zebras in front in the 13th minute, but Greg Freeman levelled for the Lions within a minute.

Ricky Self restored the visitors' advantage on the half-hour, but Freeman struck again in the 42nd minute to make it 2-2 at the interval.

Two goals by Dwayne Walsh, in the 53rd and 70th minutes, gave Zebras the three points.

In the Saturday evening match, fifth-placed Clarence United scored a comfortable 5-0 win over second-last Taroona at home at Wentworth Park.

Luke Cripps headed home Mattias Toghill's corner in the 8th minute to put Clarence in front, while Sam McIntyre added the second in the 34th minute when the Taroona keeper, Richard Nettlefold, could only parry a Cripps shot.

Three goals in seven minutes completed the victory. Substitute Ben Hamlett set up McIntyre for his second and Clarence's third in the 73rd minute, while Ben Parker nodded home Grant Malcolm's free-kick in the 75th minute to make it 4-0.

Hamlett completed the scoring in the 79th minute with a left-foot drive into the corner of the net.

Blue Eagles flying high in Fed cup

By Nat Adamopoulos

It was cup action all around in SA this week with 8 matches being played in Round 2 of the FFSA Federation Cup. At Con Makris Park Adelaide Galaxy had a tough match hosting Adelaide Blue Eagles who they will meet again next week in round 8 of the season, the homeside eventually going down to a single goal being scored in the 2nd minute by defender Gianluca Lagati.

A game where both teams lined up with changed squads, Blue Eagles welcoming back striker Saranti Parisos, eligible for the cup match only and second string keeper Lucas Andreucci being promoted to top spot. Galaxy Coach Carl Maynard was forced to replace experience with youth with Yeing, Caine, Capel, Dittmar and McGreevy taking the place of Christophersen, Markham, DeGiovaniello, De Bono and Macolino who were carrying injuries.

The match was played with some tenacity, Blue Eagles off to a great start surprising the homeside with the early goal coming from a corner that found defender Lagati right in the goal line controlling the ball down with his body to then tap in through the Galaxy defence. Four minutes later young eagle Kym Harris was unlucky not to find the back of the net when his header went over the cross bar. Blue eagles attacked relentlessly throughout the first 45 minutes starting from the back with solid defender Dean Kenrick, through midfielder Mitch Nicholson, a young man who has been most impressive so far this season. To add to the run against them, Galaxy's keeper Ryan Veitch sustained a freak injury in the 14th minute, when he split the webbing of his right hand after going up for a save, unable to take any further part in the match, calling upon Julian Torresan having to don the gloves for the remainder of the match after just completing a game for the reserves that went to penalties. The Blue Eagles strikers Fortunato Filletti and Saranti Parisos were getting special attention from the Galaxy defence, Parisos the prime target. After being on the end of a couple of well timed knocks to his ankle within the space of about eight minutes, Parisos was eventually forced to come off in the 28th minute, after the left ankle was caught up in the feet of defender Liam Wooding, losing his footing as he went for a shot on goal and his chance to continue on in the match. What little forward approach Galaxy had on the ball was quickly smothered by the Eagles defence with the exception of a good chance in the 37th minute where a corner kick was blasted into goal, the Eagles defence saving the day yet again with a clearance off the line. With no love lost between these two sides, a flurry of yellow cards that started from the 20th minute saw five of Galaxy's players being booked in the last 25 minutes of the first half, with Captain Michael Doyle being brought off for Evan Metanomski in the 40th minute to avoid a send off.

The second half saw more of the same from Blue Eagles, continually creating attacking passages of play putting the Galaxy defenders and keeper under constant pressure. Galaxy's youngsters had a good chance to equalize midway through the second half through Capel, Wooding and Caine, but Eagles keeper Andreucci did an admirable job to keep a clean sheet. One has to feel for Eagles forward Chad Bugeja normally very successful in front of goal, whose numerous shots this game either went wide or were saved by Torresan. Eagles duo Mitch Nicholson and Evan Kounavelis did most of the leg work for the Eagles, continually bringing the ball up front for their target men, as did Captain Damien DiMella. Credit to the young Galaxy side for keeping the scoreline at the single goal only, with special mention going to the keeper Torresan for playing a marathon of over 200 minutes of football in a single afternoon. Galaxy Coach Carl Maynard was philosophical in his post match review of the game.

"We had a very different side out there due to unavailability of players, a different structure, different formation so naturally the game was played out of our normal style. We didn't play well and we're out of the cup but I'm happy with the young lads and their effort. We face up to them again in a big game next week, one where I anticipate all my starting 11 will be back so it will be a very different Galaxy side out there."

At Pirate Park, Premier league side Pirates caused the upset of the round defeating Super league side Raiders 3-2 with goals coming from Scott Unglaube with a brace and Andrew Pemberton for the Pirates and Raiders tall man up front Nic Kuzman and Craig Goodwin. After being 2 zip up at half time, the visitors came back with 20 minutes of solid football that saw the vulnerability of the Pirates backline exposed and under pressure. But the Pirates dug in deep and managed to come up with a late goal to give them the passage through to the Quarter Finals on the 14th June.

Para Hills Knights took Adelaide City to extra time and penalties at The Paddocks, Knights keeper facing up to his old side and a great goal for goal game unfolding for the diehard football fans. The Knights eventually took out line honours with a 5-4 win on penalties after finishing the normal time of 90 minutes with scores locked in at 2-all and three a piece after 120 minutes. Goal scorers for Para Hills were Alex Mullen with two and Steven Ward, while for Adelaide City speedy Eli Vlassis, midfielder Nicky Orr and racehorse Nick Budin all scored. In the six goals scored during the duration of the match three were penalties with the great maestro Damian Mori giving one of those away. The loss adds to the woes and the indifferent season City have had so far in 2010.

Another great quality and very evenly matched game between Enfield City Falcons and Modbury Jets was played out at Rushworth Reserve between the two Premier League sides, Enfield just coming out on top with a goal late in the game making it a 3-2 victory to the home side. Goals came care Mark Graham, Jim Stavrides and Jo Costa and for the Jets Striker Shane Pearce, and solid rock Scotty Weidenbach. It's a case of sweet revenge after the flogging the Jets gave the Falcons a few weeks back on their MetroStars had no real trouble against State League side Northern Demons trouncing them 5-0 at TK Shutter Reserve. Goal scorers for the Stars were MetroStars young gun Jackson Groves with a double, Michael Pirone returning to the game, Michael Matricciani and Steven Grelli both with a single. West Adelaide went on with their winning lease on life defeating Croydon Kings 2-1 their fountain of youth Coach Carl Robinson scoring one and Harry Scoumbros scoring the other. The single goal for Croydon came from Frank Violi.

In the night games Premier League side Salisbury went down to Super League side Campbelltown City Red Devils 2-4 with the away side scoring all six goals. Salisbury did play patches of very good football to keep the game at a competitive level but the experience of the Super league won out in the end. Campbelltown's scorers were Matthew Deegan with a brace, creative Aaron Taye and Vas Parhas with a single each. The other night match at Frank Mitchell Park saw two Premier league clubs take to the pitch, the Comets having to watch a mini comeback by the home side White City Warriors to take the game to extra time. White City who had knocked out cup holders Cumberland the previous round didn't get off to a good start going 0-2 down by the half time break thanks to Comets Frank Marafioti being the sole goal scorer. But a valiant effort by Warrior Vasijevic who scored two in the second half to level the scores and take the game to another 30 minutes. The Comets held off the momentum of the Warriors and evergreen veteran Nathan Day turned to hero, putting away the winner to give his Coach (and ex team mate) Barney Smith another sweet victory to savour. The Quarter Finals of the FFSA Federation Cup will be held on June 14th weekend.

Stirling Lions Stun Knights

By Ashley Morrison

There is an old adage in football that if you don't notice the referee he must have had a good game. Sadly after the Western Knights match with Stirling Lions most of the discussion was to do with the referee, and detracted from Stirling's deserved victory.

The Knights created the first scoring chance as early as the fifth minute when David Micevski crossed from the right and the ball dropped to Montgomery at the far post. He struck the ball on the volley and then watched his effort rebound off the cross bar.

Stirling were finding plenty of space down the right and Frost was causing problems with his runs down the flank and his incisive passes infield. It was one of those passes in the 12th minute that saw Robinson slip in behind the Knights defence, but he appeared to have scuffed his shot wide. Referee Tolmie disagreed and awarded a corner, much to the disgust of goalkeeper Fraser Siddall who picked up a yellow card for arguing too vehemently.

In the 21st minute the same two were centre stage again. Siddall split a long range effort and lunging forward tried to grab the ball at the second attempt, while Robinson tumbled over him. Referee Tolmie blew his whistle and to most people's surprise not least Robinson's, pointed to the spot. If as the referee deemed, Siddall had impeded Robinson inside the box, surely the offence warranted at least a yellow card and Siddall's dismissal? The referee opted to punish the Knights with no more than the penalty which Robinson dispatched past Siddall to give Stirling a deserved lead.

This goal sparked a flat Knights side into life for a brief spell, a spell that saw Daniel Micevski find Van Dongen, who shot wide. This was followed by the Knights best move of the match; David Price played the ball in towards Montgomery, who stepped over the ball and drew the Stirling defence leaving Van Dongen in space. His shot was hard and low, but Kevin Miller was down quickly to smother for Stirling.

In the 33rd minute referee Tolmie was centre stage once again. Versaico came through the back of Ingram and Stirling correctly won a free kick at the edge of the Knights box, on the right. However before that Ingram lashed out and blatantly kicked a Knights player out of frustration. The referee simply wagged his finger and told him he was a naughty boy, and no card was shown, when many would have produced a red, as David Beckham will remember.

From the free kick Bobby Wilson curled a shot over the wall and struck the Knights crossbar. Siddall appeared to have the shot covered, although his coach Paul Price let him know that he felt the wall was wrongly positioned.

A minute later the Knights 'keeper was at his best to tip over a shot on the turn from Stirling's inspirational Robinson, and they were lucky to go in at half time only a goal down. To get back into this game they needed Anthony Campbell who was an inspiration for them last season to show a little interest, as in the first half he had been a mere passenger, leaving Montgomery a lone figure up front. Five minutes into the second half and Siddall conceded a corner from an innocuous effort from Ingram. Robinson whipped the ball in from the right and rising at the back post to head home was Bobby Wilson.

The Knights stung by that goal again lifted momentarily, and when Hind picked the ball up in midfield, advanced and let fly from 30 metres it looked like he had provided the spark they needed, but his shot thundered off the crossbar, when it probably deserved to nestle in the back of the net.

The Knights needed inspiration, but no changes were forthcoming until the 74th minute when bizarrely coach Price took off both of his strikers, Campbell and Montgomery and replaced them with the only forward he had on the bench, Trim and pushed Van Dongen forward from midfield. It was a move that was not met with approval by the Knights faithful. Stirling had chances to seal the game, none better than in the 84th minute when Siddall inexplicably with no attacker near him punched the ball straight to substitute Boi. Just four metres from goal and with the net gaping before him, he somehow managed to miss the target completely. Then Robinson was through and lobbed Siddall, but the ball bounced wide.

The Knights did score in the final minute, a cross from the right was headed down to Trim inside the box, and he shot, the ball struck Gavin and was deflected past a stranded Miller. However despite the massive deflection, Trim was credited with the goal. Sadly that was not the end of the afternoon's drama as in injury time referee Tolmie decided it was time to throw away commonsense and issue two red cards, one to Robinson for Stirling and one to Lecky for the Knights. The two had clashed and Lecky trod on Robinson as he stumbled, an action that maybe could have been avoided. Robinson then understandably, although foolishly, reacted and kicked out at Lecky. With less than a minute to go, one would have hoped that commonsense would have prevailed and a talking to would have sufficed; especially in light of the referees earlier decisions. Now Stirling will lose their key player for at least two weeks, and that will be a huge blow as he is without doubt when Robinson plays well they play well.

In other matches ECU Joondalup twice came from behind to draw 2-2 with Floreat Athena, and were by all accounts unlucky not to take all three points. Struggling Inglewood found themselves 3-0 up against Sorrento and must have thought they were heading for their fourth win of the season, but Trevor Morgan's men came storming back to take all three points winning 5-4.

After two good results in the past two weeks against Perth and the Western Knights Swan produced another when they defeated high flying Balcatta 1-0 away from home.

In the final game to complete the round, Perth SC overtook the Knights at the top of the standings after beating Armadale 2-0.

Stadium upgrade a boost for football

Peak body Football West congratulates the State Government for its decision to invest $82 million into the upgrade of ME Bank Stadium in East Perth.

The funding for stage one will allow ME Bank Stadium to receive much needed upgrades to its infrastructure including a new East Stand and pitch upgrades, with additional corporate facilities, changing rooms and player amenities also under consideration.

"There is no question that a rectangular stadium provides the best viewing experience for sports such as rugby union and league, and soccer," said Minister for Sport and Recreation Terry Waldron.

"We look forward to many successful seasons on and off the field for the Perth Glory, the Western Force, and perhaps even a league team."

Football West Chairman Mr Kevin Campbell AM recognises the importance of the State Government Support for rectangular sports.

"An upgrade of facilities at ME Bank Stadium is long overdue, and we commend the Government for their support in developing an improved spectator experience for rectangular sports."

"The upgrades will ensure first class facilities for the Perth Glory and puts Western Australia on the map to host future Qantas Socceroos and Westfield Matildas matches and to again bring the World Game back to the local community," he said.

"Following the recent announcement for the 2018 and 2022 FIFA World CupTM Bid and the inclusion of Perth as a host city, Football West now looks forward to working with all levels of Government and the corporate community to further develop the game to its full potential, including the construction of a purpose built home for football in WA."

The State Government expect construction to commence in 2012 with a capacity for 25,000 spectators.

This timetable is contingent on the State Government coming to agreement with the Town of Vincent on the future ownership of the facility.

United denied by Strikers fight back

By Russ Gibbs

Tuggeranong United were denied what would have been a second successive surprise victory by a late fight back from Goulburn Strikers at Kambah on Sunday afternoon. United, fresh from a 2-1 upset of title-chasing Belconnen United, put a severe dent in the Strikers own top-four aspirations by taking a 2-0 lead in front of a raucous home support before Goulburn hit back with a brace of their own to earn a 2-2 draw.

With midfield schemer Tim Stewart missing from the starting line up with a rib injury Tuggeranong coach Darren Viskovich handed a start to mercurial talent Matt Menser in an attacking midfield role in order to give the visitors something to think about.

United took a while to settle with the Strikers having the best of the opening half with a number of half chances that, while going close, hardly threatened Matt McDonald in the Tuggeranong goal. With the sides still deadlocked at half-time it took a moment of inspiration for the home team to open the scoring.

Firebrand striker Alex Weber struck a low shot that Goulburn goalkeeper Jesse Bunt did well to block with his feet, but the ball fell kindly for Aaron Cashman to slide home into an empty net. If that excited the home support they were on their feet again minutes later when Weber was up-ended in the area after a blistering break through the Strikers defence. Whilst contact appeared minimal the referee had no hesitation in awarding the spot-kick. Menser took it and duly sent Bunt the wrong way to establish a 2-0 lead.

Goulburn though are made of stern stuff and reduced the deficit five minutes later when Sam Taylor got on the end of a through ball to slash a shot across McDonald into the far corner. And the comeback was completed six minutes from time when a long throw by Brody Willis was allowed to bounce in the United penalty area where Strikers captain Andrew Aliffi was on hand to gleefully crash the ball into the net from close range.

Neither side were able to fashion an opening after this in order to win the game which ended in an entertaining 2-2 draw.

Elsewhere, Canberra FC romped to a 4-0 win against Woden Valley at Deakin Stadium. Michael Spaleta struck twice becoming the league's leading scorer with eight goals with Adam Spaleta and Alex Castro adding the other goals. Two goals in sixty seconds after the interval was the key in this one with the Champions wasting a stack of chances to increase their lead.

There were three dismissals and four goals at O'Connor Enclosed where ANU FC fell to a 1-3 home defeat to Canberra Olympic who moved up to third in the table with the victory. Andrew Ross and Cyffin Evans (Canberra Olympic) and Tom McLachlan (ANU FC) were sent off in the second half with Ross and McLachlan seeing red for their part in a mini-brawl. Robbie Shroder's second half hat-trick swung the game in Olympic's favour after Anthony Bekavac had earlier put ANU FC in front.

hard fought 2-0 win over third place Canberra City on Friday evening at Hawker Football Centre. Goals from Danny Macor, with a first half penalty, and Dustin Wells midway through the second half was enough for the Blue Devils to win a fast-paced match played at a very high tempo. Even the second half dismissal of Belconnen head coach Scott Conlon for dissent didn't faze the visitors unduly with the team making the ideal response to last weekend's shock home loss to bottom-of-the-table Tuggeranong United.

In the clash of the newly-promoted teams Cooma Tigers defeated Monaro Panthers 1-0 at Nijong Oval. Jean-Pierre D'Ambrosio's 28th minute strike was the difference in a match in which the Panthers wasted a stack of opportunities.

Foxes lead increases as Woden are held

Belwest Foxes have increased their lead at the top of The Tradies Women's Premier League to eight points as they defeated Weston Creek 4-0 whilst rivals Woden Valley were held to a 1-1 draw by a battling Canberra FC at Woden Park.

A goal from Sophie Kochinos was enough for Canberra FC to gain a solid draw from a match with Woden Valley that the Valley youngsters were expected to win. Jaline Hoek did score for Woden but the result leaves them playing catch up on the leaders the Foxes who were, once again, in top form in seeing off reigning Champions Weston Creek.

Canberra United W-League player Cian Maciejewski struck twice with Hope Wilkins and Tahlia Stanley also on the score sheet on a comprehensive 4-0 result. Maciejewski's goals took her tally to six for the season and see her in third place on the top scorers chart just behind Belconnen United's Matildas international Caitlin Munoz.

Action from the 2-2 draw between Tuggeranong and Goulburn

Munoz was on target for the seventh time this term as Belconnen United comfortably saw off ANU WFC 4-0 at Willows. Munoz was joined on the score board by Maja Blasch who scored a double and young Tahlia Blackhorse who scored her first ever Premier League goal with her first touch in the top flight after coming on as a substitute.

In the final match of the round Tugger-nong United were simply far too sharp for Brindabella Blues in the Southside derby at Kambah. Strikers Julie Ibarra and Freyja Jacobsen had a field day with Ibarra striking five and Jacobsen four in a 10-1 rout. Kate Allen was the other Tuggeranong scorer in the club's biggest top flight victory to date. Mel Reavell poached a consolation for Brindabella who had no answer to the pace and power of their hosts who move up to fourth on the Premier League ladder after this big win.

Matildas scale great wall of Asia Cup

The Westfield Matildas have produced a scintillating second half performance to beat Korea Republic 3-1 and ensure qualification to the semi-finals of the AFC Women's Asian Cup in Chengdu, China.

A second-half 15 minute flurry of goals in ensured Australia took out the Group B match with Kim Carroll, Lisa De Vanna and Sam Kerr all getting their names on the score sheet.

A late goal from Kang Sun Mi made for a tense finale to the match but resolute defending from a determined Westfield Matildas outfit meant the points, and semi-final qualification, remained theirs.

The Westfield Matildas embarked on their AFC Women's Asian Cup campaign with a 2-nil win over a spirited Vietnam at the Chengdu Sports Center Stadium in Chengdu, China on Wednesday.

Leena Khamis popped up to score the first with a header following a curling cross from Kylie Ledbrook.

Ledbrook later guaranteed the result with a spot kick, calmly slotting her first ever goal for the Westfield Matildas after Tameka Butt was felled in the area.

"I'm satisfied with the win but thought we could have played better," said Westfield Matildas Head Coach Tom Sermanni.

"I think we've come to expect these tough games from teams like Vietnam, Thailand and Myanmar and to come through with a victory is quite a positive for us."

Sermanni expects even tougher matches against the Korea Republic and China, one of the reasons for holding back some of his more experienced campaigners from this match.

"When we play in these tournaments it is very important to use the squad as a whole instead of just relying on the same starting 11."

In Australia's final group game yesterday the Matildas succumb 1-0 to the host nation, China, in front of a large and parochial crowd.

Ashy tops, as Inter wins GF rematch

By Niki Cook

Round 7 of the Victorian Women's Premier League saw the first Grand Final rematch of the season, but in a departure from the normal order of things, neither of the teams involved occupies top spot on the WPL ladder. Ashburton has leapt to the top of the standings after two wins in quick succession, with Box Hill close behind after its victory over Heidelberg, while the spoils were shared between Preston and Altona.

The round began on Friday night at Wembley Park, with a rematch of last season's Grand Final, with Box Hill Inter once again coming out on top over Heidelberg United. The match, as expected, was a fairly even tussle, but Inter was the side that capitalised on its chances, and thus secured the three points. Inter enjoyed a slender one-goal lead at the interval, but added two more after the break to virtually secure the game. Aleksandra Sinclair, Anika Harris and Tal Karp were all on target for the home side, with Melanie Camilleri scoring a consolation for Heidelberg for the penalty spot to make the final score 3-1. While United has been a consistent challenger to Inter in the WPL for a number of seasons, it has always struggled at Wembley Park, and it has not registered a point at the ground for more than five seasons. The victory, Box Hill's fourth of the season, leaves it second on the ladder with fourteen points, with Heidelberg five points further back in fourth.

A point gained or two points lost? Both Altona City and Preston Lions may consider that question, after playing out a 0-0 draw at HC Kim Reserve on Sunday. With the two teams lying towards the bottom of the WPL ladder, both would have earmarked this as a potential win, but ultimately the points were shared. It has been a promising week for Altona after a horror start to the season, as it has picked up four points in its last two games. Preston, on the other hand, will have been glad to have arrested its run of defeats, having gone into the game on the back of successive losses. The draw means that, while both teams add a point to their tally for the season, neither moves on the ladder, with Preston sitting seventh, and Altona one point behind in eighth.

Ashburton backed up from its 2-1 triumph over Sandringham on Monday night with its fourth straight victory, defeating Casey Comets 3-2 at Ashburton Park on Sunday to maintain its position at the top of the ladder. Victory for the home side was by no means assured, as it had to overcome a first half deficit to claim the three points. Casey's Nicola Prins and Alexandra Gummer were both on target in the first half, to give the visitor a 2-1 half time lead. Ashburton was able to fight back in the second period, however, scoring twice without reply to secure the points. Ellvana Curo, Gulcan Koca and Christina Leland were the scorers for the home team. Ashburton moved to the top of the ladder courtesy of its victory over Sandringham, and it is a position that it continues to occupy, sitting one point clear of Box Hill. Casey, after its third defeat of a mixed season, remains sixth.

The final match of the round saw Sandringham play its second consecutive Monday night match, taking on bottom side South Melbourne at Kingston Heath Soccer Complex. The result will follow in next week's Round 8 of the WPL begins on Saturday afternoon at Epsom Huntly Recreation Reserve, as Casey Comets makes the long trip to take on Bendigo Vipers. With only one place and one point separating the sides on the ladder, it is shaping up as a crucial game, if either team is to have any realistic chances of making the finals. On Sunday afternoon Preston Lions hosts Box Hill Inter at BT Connor Reserve, whilst across the city at HC Kim Reserve, Altona City meets Sandringham. The round again features Monday night action, but this week it is at Olympic Village, with Heidelberg United facing league leader Ashburton, in what should be another entertaining clash. South Melbourne has the bye.

Malvern causes another upset

By Aritro Abedin

Round seven of the State League Division One saw Whittlesea notch up yet another win to maintain their one point lead at the top of the table, while unpredictable Malvern City produced a surprise win over Fawkner to create a buffer between them and the clubs at the bottom.

North Geelong Warriors 3 vs Western Suburbs 0

The Warriors comfortably dealt with the nine man Western Suburbs in a game which was marred by indiscipline from the visitors. A series of shirt-tugging incidents and tackles from behind by two of the Western Suburbs players saw the referee go to his book four times within the first 25 minutes, eventually sending off both with more than two thirds of the game left to play. The Warriors were ruthless in exploiting the man-advantage, with Daniel Dragicevic's half-volley breaking the home side's resolve, before a flick-on from gun teenager Matthew Demo set up Robert Zadworny's finish. Demo then capped off an excellent performance with an 80th minute goal to give his side an easy three points. Warriors coach was pleased with the result, but refused to get too carried away about the teenager's form. 'He's been good but he's got a lot to learn. He just needs to play more games and become consistent.'

Bulleen Lions 2 vs Clifton Hill 0

The Lions bounced back from last week's loss against Fawkner with a clinical performance against Clifton Hill at the Veneto Club on Saturday. It was a tight encounter with both sides keeping possession and adopting a patient approach, but a stunning piece of skill from Adrian Del Monaco broke the deadlock in the 18th minute as he controlled a ball on his thigh before firing it into the back of the net. The Lions then doubled their advantage, with Anthony Ramzy being fouled inside the box and Anthony Magnacca making no mistake with the resulting spot-kick. 'It was an even sort of game, they played well and did a very good job of keeping possession,' said Lions assistant Nick Crivelli. 'But we did the job in the end, and we're very pleased.' The Lions lack of experience has seen them drop points in a couple of tough encounters this season, but this result will bring a very welcome three points to a side that has a very genuine claim to being title challengers.

Malvern City 2 vs Fawkner Blues 0

Pat Liapis' gritty Malvern City side sprung another upset on better credentialed opposition, as they dealt with high flying Fawkner at Kingston Heath on Saturday. The Blues were kept at bay in the first half by the home side as Malvern exercised the patient defending that has become a hallmark of their play this season, and the two teams went into the break with the score deadlocked. However, City came out all guns blazing in the second half, dominating possession and carving out a number of excellent chances. They were eventually rewarded for their efforts as a long-ball caught the Blues defence napping, and George Kotsiris was on hand to latch onto the opportunity to put Malvern City in front in the 60th minute. Simon Broome then followed up only a few minutes later with his side's second goal to round off a deeply satisfying victory for the home side. 'It was a good all round performance,' said Pat Liapis later. 'Fawkner have the best forwards in the comp, but they can be a bit weak with their defence and we wanted to take advantage of it.' Results have been up and down for Malvern this season, but Liapis is confident that his side are starting to develop the cohesion that he is looking for. 'Teams do have to gel, and for the last seven weeks we've been gelling. We've come up from state two so it takes time, but I think we're really starting gel now.'

St Albans Saints 2 vs Pascoe Vale 2

Pascoe Vale's display of fluent passing and attacking play was not enough to overcome a St Albans side who dug in to snare a point in an entertaining match at Churchill Reserve on Sunday afternoon. Pascoe Vale started the game brightly and they were rewarded for their attacking endeavour as a botched clearance allowed sharp-shooter Liam Flynn to open the scoring in the 7th minute. The Englishman then completed his brace 10 minutes before half time to put his side 2-0 ahead. However the Pascoe Vale defence's failure to deal with the Saints' aerial onslaught saw Goran Jozeljic pull one back for the home side right on the half-time break. In the second half Pascoe Vale created a number of opportunities to go further ahead with some crisp passing play, but they were eventually punished for their wastefulness in front of goal as another long ball saw Goran Jozeljic snatch an equalizer for St Albans. George Karakassis voiced mixed feelings about the result. 'Look, to be honest the boys were a bit disappointed with the result because coming off two losses in a row, I suppose we were really looking for the three points. But a draw away to St Albans is a pretty good result. We actually had a few chances after we went up 2-1, and we probably could have made it 3-1 but we just didn't take our chances. But I suppose it was a fair result in the end, because that's the way St Albans play, they dig deep and defend well.'

Fitzroy boys to the fore!

By Adam Husseini

Fitzroy FC 5 vs. 2 Albert Park

The opening match of the night saw Fitzroy take on a resilient Albert Park FC. Fitzroy started slowly for the second week in a row and found them a goal down after Minja Savic (APFC) scrapped on the edge of the 'D' and poked home from close range. His next contribution was just as dramatic, fouling and receiving a yellow card, then proceeding to persistently remonstrating with the referee receiving a second yellow for dissent and he was off. Fitzroy were awarded a fifth foul penalty late in the first half, Alor's shot was saved but Minopolous followed up cleverly tucking home for 1-1 at the break. Fitzroy ran riot again in a 5 minute spell in the second half scoring three times and putting Albert Park to the sword. Some clumsy defending by Pollatti (FFC) saw Rashidi nip in and stem the tide with Albert Park's second goal but it was a mere consolation. Fitzroy showing resolute defending and holding out for a solid 5-2 victory.

A young Fitzroy outfit remain undefeated

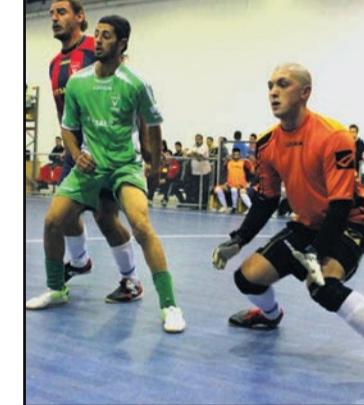

Metropolitan's living Legend Ivan "The Incredible" Zilic been closely watched by Mickleham's No.1 in goals Apostolakis

Metropolitan 10 vs. 7 Mickleham
Metropolitan were looking to consolidate a position higher on the ladder as they took on new boys Mickleham. The hammers welcomed back Star playmaker Anthony Colosimo back into the fold after weeks of 'will he or won't he play'. Metro's little emperor Alija Redzepovic was in the mood and scored four goals to take him top of the pile in the leading goalscorer race as he schooled the young Mickleham team. Mickleham had a star of their own in Ryan Filipovic who finished the night with five goals! Metro went into the break 5-3 up but were by no means guaranteed 3 points. Mickleham fought for dear life scoring 3 goals in the second half to give themselves a chance. Nanna Addo & Jason Ioannidis

FC Essendon 6 vs. 6 Brimbank FC
2009 Champions FC Essendon took on newcomers Brimbank in the prime time clash of the night. Three time leading goal kicker Alexander Stevanovic scored four for Essendon, while Vadim Mazursky scored three for Brimbank as both tried to help their side to victory. The game was a to and fro battle early on, a goal for goal contest that could not separate the two. They went into the break 3-3 and looked ready to rumble in the second half. A couple of Igor Stevanovic's famous 'toe poker' looks to put Brimbank to the sword, but Brimbank had Emir Ameti (2 goals) & Adis Kablar (1 goal) to thank who equalised with only minutes to go. Both sides would be disappointed to not take all three points on a night where the top 3 sides are starting to pull away a little at the top of the table.

FC Prahran 9 vs. 5 Ashburton FC
The last time these two sides played Prahran won 10-9 in an old fashioned goal frenzy as Ashburton were keeperless & Prahran were in the mood. Prahran were on cloud nine after beating North Melbourne last week and looked to consolidate back to back wins. They started on the back foot as Diego Assaeda let rip from distance and buried the ball into the bottom corner for Ashburton. It was the wake up call Prahran needed as Sanjin Lazetic & Clint Mogoai were only breached by some timid shots by Minh Nguyen & fine interplay between Akal Abdullatif & Dimitri Vithoulkas. Ahmed Muktar was in red hot form waltzing past the entire snoozing Ashburton side no less than four times and even dribbling Rudi Prosic in the Ashburton goal. Luciano Bessa, Ashburton's last minute winner against Pascoe Vale was only half fit but did well when he was on. Ashburton are really missing Manny Karas & Ahmed Azzam. Haider Noor was quiet for Prahran after his scintillating performance last week.

Local derby honours shared

By John Lister

SMILES and scowls were evenly split between Oakleigh Cannons coach John Anastasiadis and his Bentleigh Green counterpart Goran Lozanovski after their Premier League clash ended in a 2-2 draw on Friday night.

Both sides had their chances to win and both recognised they could have been the loser.

But after a 1-1 draw when they first met in round one, a further draw at the start of the second stage of the season seemed a fair result.

Cannons fans have become accustomed to the side's slow start and propensity to give away early goals. On Friday night at the Kingston Heath Soccer Complex the league leaders managed to keep a clean sheet through the first stages but then never got out of first gear.

The Greens took full advantage of the lapse, scoring twice through Dean Piemonte and Alex Rojas.

The ever elusive Piemonte managed to gain an extra metre of space and be perfectly placed when the ball was crossed from the right to fire past Griffin McMaster. On the verge of half-time Rojas left the Oakleigh defence stunned when a curving, swirling, corner kick went straight into the top corner.

The Greens left the ground happy after stringing together some of their best soccer of recent weeks while the Cannons knew they could do better.

And they did. Quite what Anastasiadis said in the dressing room during the break will probably never be known, but it was different Oakleigh that came out for the second period.

With their mojo restored they reduced the deficit quickly when John Fitzgerald headed in after a goalmouth scramble. A few minutes later Michael Curcija volleyed home a cross and it was game on.

With the final whistle pending both teams had chances to take all the points, Jerry Karpeh being foiled by Henry Clifford while at the other end Oakleigh's defence was also stretched.

Anastasiadis said he was happy to take a point but also disappointed that it wasn't all three. "We were slow to start and at halftime I just told the group that if they were as good as they thought then they had to show character and endeavour to get back into the game. To their credit that's what they did."

Lozanovski echoed the sentiments. He couldn't argue with a point, but knew all three had been there for the taking. "It's scary when you are 2-0 or 1-0 up at halftime, you are always waiting for the goal that will put them back in touch. That's what happened.

"But I am happy because I thought we had the better of most of the game and we continued to improve and play good soccer."

With no game for the next two weeks he hopes the Greens can keep that form while the Cannons, coming towards the end of a trot which has seen them play four games away from home, will make the most of as nine-day break before they meet Northcote City at the John Cain Memorial Park next Sunday.

Said Lozanovski: "We have been playing better and better and need to keep that going. It's a challenge."

Anastasiadis said his squad would have a light training session on Monday before resuming normal routines on Wednesday and Friday.

The Greens seem to be coasting when Alex Rojas made it 2-0.

Unlucky Gully held by Hume

By Markian Jaworsky

The Green Gully Cavaliers travelled to the difficult location of Broadmeadows Valley to play the high-flying Hume City, and managed to come home with a result, and a unlucky feeling that they could and should have won the game, with late chances from Gary Wales and Jason Hayne.

Gully were fortunate with the weather, as the open Broadmeadows Valley usually is the ideal venue for kite-flying as much as it is for long range strikes on goal. Gully won the toss, and chose to kick with the wind in the first half, and in the second half, the wind died down, if not out altogether, allowing for Gully's attacking play to dominate.

Under the guidance of Ian Dobson, the Cavaliers have evidently improved in their past two outings as a collective unit on the park.

They came up against a Hume City team used to playing with the elements at Broadmeadows Valley, and arguably were the better team on the day. Whilst Hume played a very direct long ball game, the visiting Green Gully made most their chances from a passing game and counter-attacking down the flanks. Ironically, Gully missed many chances to score from encouraging build up play, and Hume City scored from a small range of genuine efforts on the Gully goal that eventuated from the long ball from defense, Hume's Zoran Petrevski claimed the goal after 55 minutes. Five minutes prior, Gully put a corner to the near post, and in the haste to clear the ball, the crowded Hume defense somehow managed to bundle the ball into their own goal.

Green Gully gave a second half substitute debut to Kiwi International Jason Hayne, who has arrived during the transfer window, along with Brent Fisher from across the Tasman Sea.

Speaking after the match, Coach Paul Harris spoke of the new recruits "Jason did well today, he could have been the hero, but his positioning did not make for an easy volley. We have also signed (Kiwi) striker Brent Fisher, though he was struck down with a last minute virus and was not available for selection today."

Unfortunately Green Gully were not successful in attempting to bring back Aziz Behich from Melbourne Victory, Hume City won that negotiation battle, however Man of the Match Steven Burton did very well keeping Aziz fairly quiet for most of the day.

In the Under 21's, Hume City defeated the Green Gully Cavaliers by 3 goals to 1.

MELBOURNE KNIGHTS

Dubois in the nick of time!

By Luke Sheehan

MELBOURNE Knights' Jean Dubois pulled off a spectacular scissor goal at the death to snatch a point from its clash against Dandenong Thunder at Knights Stadium on Sunday night, finishing 1-1.

The Thunder was denied their fourth win of the season when Dubois' goal bounced across Dandenong keeper Stuart Webster in the 90th minute, cancelling out Veton Korcarevski's 13th minute opener.

The draw takes the Knights to nine points along with Dandenong, but the two sides are separated by the Thunder's poor goal difference. Knights assistant coach Paul Magdic said the Dandenong game was a mirror image of the Green Gully game last week, but for the dramatic equaliser and a lift in endeavour from the boys in red.

"This was a little bit of déjà vu against Green Gully. At the end of the day, Green Gully got their goal, and we made a few mistakes leading up to it. We failed to clear the ball in the end and we were behind the eight ball one-nil down."

"The difference between last week and this week was the intensity and the effort from the boys overall, and we did have clearly more of the possession and we were still confident that we were going to equalise."

Magdic said a last-gasp goal such as Dubois' might lift the club from the depths of the Premier League ladder, as well as a few handy inclusions in the coming weeks.

"We're going to be spoiled for choices in the coming weeks with Tomislav Ples coming back from injury, and he's a highly rated striker."

"We'll have Danny Tiatto coming into the heart of the midfield, that's one thing that's definitely going to happen for next week. We'll also have the return of our captain Ivica Praiz."

For the Thunder, it was another case of bad luck, according to coach Stuart Munro, but also admitted the Knights would have been unlucky to get no points from the game.

"We're losing a lot of games to those type of goals, whether its long range free kicks, or short corner, nothing seems to be straightforward about it."

"It was a big three points today, I mean I know we weren't playing well, but it would have been a big three points to get, but we never got it. We just have to look at next week."

"I think they (Melbourne) would have felt very done by (if there was no equaliser). I thought we were good in the first 15 minutes but after that they controlled a lot of the game."

Munro praised his up front striker Korcarevski, who has coincidentally has now scored twice at Knights Stadium in the space of a month, the other goal coming in Thunder's draw with Sunshine.

"I thought Veton on his own up front, I thought he was terrific for us, we're just lacking penetration in midfield to hold the ball and bring people into the game."

Melbourne travel to take on Heidelberg this Sunday at 5pm at the Olympic Village, while Dandenong have the task of hosting Hume City at George Andrews Reserve at 3pm.

Bergers start to sizzle

By Gordon Bennett

Heidelberg United recorded their second successive win with this come from behind 2-1 win over Sunshine George Cross at the Olympic Village.

Heidelberg held the upper hand in the early stages forcing several corner kicks, but it was the Georgies who took the lead after 12 minutes through Taxiarihis Apostolikos. Sunshine captain Fidell Richards battled hard for the ball on the left wing and his cross was headed home by the Sunshine George Cross debutant.

Heidelberg was presented with a gift goal after 30 minutes when Chris Konstas tried to shepherd the ball out over the goal line. Heidelberg's Yannis Galanos robbed him of the ball and centred to the unmarked Heidelberg debutant George Slefandorfas who made it 1-1.

Sunshine George Cross generosity continued just before half time when David Calleja was easily robbed of the ball by Josip Kozic who slipped the ball to the unmarked Saso Alekovski who put Heidelberg 2-1 ahead.

Osagie Ederaro was a constant threat on the right wing and his cross early in the second half was deflected for a corner by a Georgie defender. From the ensuing corner Martin John pulled off the save of the game from an Ederaro header. George Slenadorfas took advantage of a hesitant Georgie defence and his toe poke went past the upright.

Goal scoring chances remained at a premium in the second half with Heidelberg doing it comfortably to hold on to a much needed win to get off the bottom of the ladder.

Heidelberg coach George Katsakis was a relieved man after the game and happy to see his team avenge the first round loss to the Georgies.

Sunshine coach Andy O'Dell was bitterly disappointed with his sides effort saying it was the worst performance to date.
